PARISH MEETINGS, DUBLIN.—No less than five Parishes—Paul's, Werburgh's, St. Audeon's, Bridget's, and mous in reprobating the proposition contained in Mr. Haw-

The week which terminates this day has been one of the finest ever experienced at this season of the year; and the farmers throughout the county have availed themselves of this providential change, with becoming gratitude and zeal.—*Kil-

THEATRE.

Last night, the most brilliant assemblage we have long beheld filled the Box row of our Theatre, to see the Opera of Guy Mannering in which a Mr. ROURKE made his second appearance, as Henry Bertram—he possesses a soft tenor voice, which he modulates very agreeably—some of the Songs he gave in fine style, and was encored in most of them—Mr. Rourke, we believe, must have made his debut here, for he seems but little acquainted with stage business, he is, however, a young man of considerable promise, and we were pleased to find he received so liberal a share of encouragement—Mr. TALBOT's Domine Sampson was prodigiously comic—it is a character for which the author has done much, but much remains for the performer—it is a kind of ad libitum part, and Mr. Talbot took all justifi-fiable liberties with it—Meg Merriles, by Mr.
LEGROSE was superior to any character we have hitherto seen him in—The parts of Colonel Mannering, Dick Hatrick, and Dandy Dindymount by Messrs POWELL, LEONARD, and JAMESON, were admirably well sustained—The gentle Lucy Bertram had a very interesting representative in Miss TREBY—in characters of this description she is eminently successful—it is in fact, the line for which her talents are peculiarly adapted —Mrs. KELLY was the Julia Mannering of the piece, and sustained it with much ability—The dancing is, we think inferior to none of the Metropolitan figurantes—Mrs. SMYTH's sylph-like form and airy step never fail to elicit a thunder of applause from every part of the House—Miss Treby's pas seul was much admired—The after-piece of High Life below Stairs was played off with the best effect—Mr. Talbot's Lord Duke is unquestionably the best we have ever seen—In consequence of the Ball at Swinburn's, there will be no Play this evening—The Heir at Law and The Three and Deuce, are announced for representation To-morrow evening, by desire of the Stewards of the Races—an overflow may be fairly anticipated under such distinguished patronage:

The following memorandum of observations made by Bonaparte, in a conversation with some English gentlemen, lately at St. Helena, has appeared in the London Morning Chronicle :—

"Memorandum of observations made by Bonaparte, in a conversation with some gentlemen, who lately touched at St. Helena, on their way to England.

"After the usual salutations, Bonaparte alluded to Gardanne's mission, by observing, that he had shown the road from Constantinople to Persia—then rapidly adverting to India, he asked what the Russians were about on their Asiatic frontier? And with little attention to the replies, proceeded to speak of the powers of the different sovereigns, and of their views.

"The Russians, he said, were the most formidable people in Europe—England and France had not the same military advantages, although their troops had more moral power than any of the other nations.

"A Frenchman, on becoming a soldier, leaves a better country than any that he can be called to serve in—and the Englishman in general finds himself worse off abroad than at home—so that only the refuse of the population is inclined to enter the arms.

"The Russian, on the contrary, ceases to be a miserable slave, and becomes literally a freeman when he quits Russia.
He improves his condition; he finds comforts which he never could enjoy at home, and consequently Alexander might increase his army to any amount, and service out of his own

If England made use of her maritime superiority she might send ambassadors to foreign courts. Now she was insulted with prohibitory decrees in every petty state. With fifty five thousand men, he repeated again and again, England can never become a Continental Power; besides, the attempt would be fatal to that free constitution in which the English so justly pride themselves, and which in truth, has been the source of her extraordinary power, commensurate with her extent.

What had been the result of her military efforts? She had got possession of his person, and an opportunity to shew her want of generosity. She had disturbed the legitimacy of thrones, since he was the lawful sovereign of France. He wished for general peace, as it was his true interest, and the only way by which he could be relieved from the rock on which he was now confined.

"He then entered into a long personal tirade against Governor Lowe, on the treatment he had received, and of the many misrepresentations of his conduct which had been put forth. He spoke of Mr. Warden's publication as unfounded in almost every particular, and expressed himself in severe terms of Lord Bathurst's speech. He was much surprised, he said, at Lord Sidmouth's and Lord Liverpool's want of decent propriety towards him on the discussion, as he thought he had shewn them civilities to secure him a more liberal treatment. England he concluded, was in a casique perdicament—she has won all, and is ruined."

county, Esq.

Samuel Fitz Henry, Esq. of Carrick on Suir, to the daughter of John Graham, Esq. of Castleboro'.

In Cork, Mr. Romaine J. Thom, to Miss Rebecca Johns, of that city.

DEATHS.

Yesterday morning, at Ardchoony, near Castle Connell, Major General Bouchier, whose death has imparted the deepest affliction to a most highly respectable family—the various duties which it became his lot to perform, evinced that he was possessed of a heart formed of the best materials—a strict regard to honor directed his actions, and, when opportunity presented, an act of friendship was never omitted—in military duty he was particularly distinguishable for all those generous, manly, and heroic virtues which dignity and adorn the character of the soldier—when he left the army, his departure was looked on by his brother Officers as a deep and irremediable calamity, and the circle in which he last moved, and often delighted, have experienced the most poignant feelings of regret in his decease—all the relative and social duties he discharged in the most exemplary manner—An amiable wife and family are involved in the deepest affliction.

In Cork, Wm. Murray, Esq. and Mr. J. Bond.

Near Randlestown, of a typhus fever, the Rev. Constantine O'Boyle, assistant Parish Priest of Drumaul, in the 34th year of his age.
