seen a letter from Jersey dated the 10th inst. which states, in allusion to the late crop of potatoes which arrived at Cork and other places, that the report of the success of the manner in which they were raised induces a further speculation: the result is thus, "In consequence of the success of the manner in which they were raised, a large brig is now taking orders for potatoes; and two cutters, when they will take 6000 capitals more, for Cork, Waterford, and Limerick.—The price is 42lb." They had better make this trip as the last.

present favourable state of the weather and promising appearance of the wheat and agriculturalists predict that the coming year will be earlier by three or four weeks than the present year, and more generally productive. The infinite satisfaction in speaking of the delightful season, which has brought a profusion of beauties. Every thing around is luxuriant, and the accounts from different parts of the kingdom are favourable and happy. The counties are enriched with millions of which now begin to fall with pearly and the fruit, as yet in embryo, looks healthy. We have also to mention the refreshing appearance of the meadows.

London Corn-Exchange, June 12.
Having a considerable arrival of Foreign Wheat this week, and but few buyers at market this morning, our sales were exceedingly heavy, although tendered on lower terms than on Monday by 2s. or 3s. per quarter. Barley fully supports its prices, the supply being small, and the present weather being very unfavourable for the growing crops, rain being fourth time, a continuance of their support.
