Her remains were interred at Castle-Connell yesterday-On Monday, at Castle-Connell, Mrs. Anglim, wife of James Anglim, Esq. of this City. A sweetness of disposition gave her un influence that endeared her to her friends, and the discharge of every moral and religious duty, secured their attachment. Although qualified for all the amiable enjoyments of society, she devoted her first cares and anxious solicitudes to the improvement of a young and amiable family; for them and with them sho lived, and to them her less is irreparable. To the poor she was kind. She was, in a word, a pious christian, an affectionate wife, a tender mother, and a sincere friend. Thus in the prime of life has the world been deprived of one of its brightest ornaments, whether we view ber in domestic life, in the interesting characters of daughter, wife or mother, or in that highly respectable walk in society in which she moved, and upon which her interesting person and truly accomplished manners reflected the utmost lustro-On Friday night last, at Lotamore, Frances, jourgest daughter of Stephen Roche, Esq. of Cork. Short has been the interval that separated this sweet child from her excellent inother. Not later than last week we had to record the death, and we attempted, however inadequately, to pourtray the exalted virtues of that lamented Lady, whose dying voice summoned her darling infant, the chief object of her parting regret, 10 follow her to a better world. The remains of the venerable Colonel Lloyd, whose death we stated in our last, (the intimation of which reached us at a forward bour of publication,) were yesterday interred in the family vault at Tower-hill. We have seldom to publish the demise of any individual who was more regarded, or possessed in a superior degree philantropy and suavity of manners; this respectable Gentleman lived in the esteem of every person who had the honor and pleasure of his acquaintance-be was a landlord of the best description, ever kind and liberal to his numerous tenantry; in his domestic circle, his highly honorable family have to deplore the best of parents and friends. Colonel Lloyd was a Magistrate of the County, a Burgess of this City, and served the office of County High Sheriff.
