H. W. BAYLEE, Treasurer.

Presenting to the public the fever report of this City for the month of August, we feel it incumbent on us to make a few observations on so very important and alarming a document. We wish to call the attention of our fellow citizens to the subject, and rouse them from the apathy with which they seem to regard it: the prevalence of a pestilential disease in this city for so long a period, has familiarized us with this terrible scourge, and in some measure allayed our apprehensions to subside; it is to this, and not to the want of sense in the disorder, that we must attribute the want of energy that prevails in devising means to strike at the root of the contagion; this will fully appear when we are obliged to state that 312 cases of fever were admitted to the hospitals during the last three months more than were admitted during the same three months last year, when the public did feel deservedly alarmed—that familiarity with wretchedness has blunted our sympathies for the miseries of the poor, and for our own miseries; we must appear too plain, when 16 deaths in a month which require commiseration and attention as certainly has been observed to lessen the mortality, should appear to any as trifling for their most active assistance; yet, if we were seriously to consider the case, the deaths are the very least of the calamities caused by this awful visitation; did we not feel too tenderly the feelings of the public, such a state of woe and misery could be laid before them, such a catalogue of calamity induced by this disease, as would convince every person capable of feeling, of his being called upon by the claims which can speak to man, to extend his charity. How trifling must any number of deaths appear, when compared with the distress & misery, that necessarily attends this disease—let us for a moment consider that 1038 patients have been admitted into the Hospitals of this City, during the last three months, we may calculate half that number to be heads of families, then fancy (what we need not fancy, but behold,) so many families, if they even escape the disease, thrown on the City to starve or to beg; every article of Furniture and Apparel is in the mean time gone to the Pawn-office—the parent leaves the Hospital, and finds his family either turned out on the world to pine in tenement lanes, entries, and deserted houses, or find them lying naked on a cold damp floor, without food or fire. This is not an exaggerated or a rare occurrence, every man who is acquainted with the poor for some time, knows well, that such a state of things will receive the often-doubted generosity of the public cannot be doubted.—We expended large sums to afford the afflicted shelter, but so long a trial, we must surely be more than unwise, if we still persist in a neglect of making a grand exertion to get at the root of the evil—to do this will at last be our best economy.—two white washers have been constantly employed for many months back, by the Committee of the Fever Hospital, but this without a complete and vigorous plan to exterminate every source of contagion, must ever be fruitless. How it is proposed to be done, shall be fully laid before the public—suffice it to say, that it is suggested to divide the City into districts as has been done in other places, and accept the gratuitous offers of the faculty, who have always so generously chosen the post of danger—their superintendance and the hearty co-operation of our fellow citizens, all that can be done by human skill may be done. To follow up this plan effectively, a fund will be required to establish a regular system of cleansing, washing, ventilating, opening windows, fumigating, &c. &c. to which it is proposed, to give employment to many, by persecuting every passenger for alms.

It is also proposed to take one or two large Houses, separate from the Hospitals, into which the patients when discharged from the convalescent wards, should be admitted and sheltered for such time as the Physician should think
