

influenced him, and his determination to stand to the end. The period of his sufferings approached, and on Friday evening he died, that he should be buried at Ednamore, the his family, one of the Clergymen who had during his illness, anxious to shew his mark of memory, was about to step into a carriage to the grave, when it was intimated to him, he would incur the most imminent danger, as forward to assassinate him; deterred by this menace, he was reluctantly obliged to relinquish, and the funeral proceeded to the church where the Clergyman of the Parish was it. The corpse, however, had scarcely the hearse, when it was forcibly seized by persons who had assembled—and, instead of the church-yard, was dragged across a ditch eld, and thrown upon the ground, with every odium and reproach. The Friends of the deceased, succeeded in bearing it to the grave, but had just commenced the solemn office of the dead, when a man stepped forward, pro-with oaths and imprecations, that the deceased be buried in any other manner than that in which others had been buried—in this outcry he was one of those who were present, and the Cler-gyman desisted from the attempt. The outcry having in some measure subsided, and the menaced having surrounded the grave, the servants, when the Clergyman was seized by the prayer book dashed from his hand upon the term of reprobation which malice could not diabolical ingenuity suggest, was prodigal upon his office as a Clergyman of the Established and the religion to which he belonged. The length committed to the grave, and the numberous shameful outrage, after some time had passed. Having thus given a correct outline of which we know not how to stigmatise by a gentle heavy reproach, we consider it to be under any observation upon the motives which the bigotted intolerance which carried it into the hands of the deceased and against his father we connect it with the exemplary and pious moments in the last moment of his existence, burst out of a dying man's apartment, to reclaim, to disturb him—our object and our determination being intolerance to the bar of public opinion—that the Authors and the Agents in this dis-saster will meet that general execration which they deserve, and in that sentence of indelible ignominy will always attend them." are alluded to, forms no part of the statement, in connection with it, deserves to be known. Four days to his death, Mr. Herbert, failing his health for a Clergyman of the Church of England, asked whence arose the change in his religious opinions, delivered in the following words:—"Some years ago I was disposed, and my wife sent for a Roman Catholic priest to attend me; in the course of conversation he asked what place of worship my wife and children attended, the Protestant Church—they will be here, if they continue in this course, and you do not prevent them going there any more!"—

He replied, "I cannot believe my wife will be here, she is a good woman; and he further observed,

"Come from the bed in which I lie, I will search you to see if you are authorised to inculcate such errors."

Mr. Herbert was restored, read his bible, and errors of the Church of Rome.

Previous to Mr. Herbert's death, he was visited by a Roman Catholic Priest, who came to represent him in his dangerous situation: and finding him inflexibly attached to the religious doctrines of the Established Church, told him that his bible was wrong, and into strong and violent invectives against the Clergy of the Established Church, stating, things, that if they were present he would put them to flight. To all which Mr. Herbert replied,

"I have no time for religious controversy; that he had a

The Wax Works will close on Saturday. Those who have not already seen them, will therefore, do well to avail themselves of this opportunity, the last they may probably, of seeing the most perfect and extensive collection now in Europe. Many who have seen several of the nals, have been astonished at the likenesses, and that in shape and expression of countenance, the "Nature's self". Some of the standing figures may more than once taken for visitors, and the mistake has rise to a good deal of pleasure.

HOUSE OF INDUSTRY

THE members regret, the nearly exhausted state of this valuable Institution, oblige the Committee to trespass on the attention of the public. This Asylum where the Lunatic and the Poor and the Orphan—the Aged and the Infirm—have a safe refuge which in this chequered scene can call for support from more fortunate fellow-beings found sometimes aid, and ceaseless benefits to this community.

At the last Meeting of the Committee, sixty thousand pounds of the wretched, were discharged without leaving the Establishment, and took extract for a sum.

An appeal of this nature has never hitherto been made to the inhabitants of Limerick—it rests in whether the doors of this House of Mercy be open, and its inmates turned out to rove through the City. Let it be remembered that, in which not long since were 53 patients, and a Look Ward, (the only refuge of this City), have grievously pressed on the industry, and that in times unexampled for nine, 350 persons have been amply fed, and in cases clothed, and prevented from expiring, on an income of little more than £1000 per annum!

Donations for the above Asylum will be received from Friends, and duly acknowledged.
