Besides the above pecuniary assistance afforded to the sufferers from fever, many miserable objects have been relieved by flannel waistcoats and other articles of clothing given by the truly benevolent ladies and gentlemen of this City; and it must be highly gratifying to them to learn that offerings, at the shrine of benevolence, have afforded a most reasonable and important benefit to their fellowcreatures.—"I was sick, and you visited me; naked, and you clothed me." The last flannel waistcoat in the Hospital was given to a poor woman about ten days back, after her accouchement there, who, with her infant, would have been nearly naked, but for the clothes thus humanely conferred upon them.
