DIED—On Thursday morning, at his street, in the 77th year of his age, Colonel of his Majesty's 9th Regiment of Dragoons, that all classes of our fellow-citizens will us in the loss of a character so long and so amongst us. Born and educated in Eng-attached to his own country, his habits yet of manners so cultivated and correct, believe, to have given offence to the feeldices of those amongst whom he resided example, through a long life, of up-punctuality in all his transactions with course of public and private benevolence in the various relations of life, were calcuesteem and respect of all. He bore a of bodily suffering, with daily increasing signation, and remained in full possession the last. It must be peculiarly interest-reader to learn, that at that hour which is "the wheat from the chaff," this revered character, disclaiming all self-righteousness solutions and the sweet and placid com-met death, from dependence only upon Saviour who "died that we might live," whom "maketh us not to be barren or
