Reverend W. D. Hoare, has received from Mrs. G. by David Booke, Esq. five pounds, donation for the Lying in Hospital.

Yesterday, Alderman Watson, Treasurer to the Home of Industry and Hospital for Lunatics, received £5 from David of Carara, Esq. for the use of that Charity. There are present 310 Objects therein; the daily consumption of coals alone is nearly 100 stoves. And the Treasurer to the Public, that, exclusive of debts amounting to more than £200, he has not this day £10 to support the work. The Archdeacon of Limerick has given one guinea to a Gentleman, to be Treasurer for the poor in the use of Industry.

We anticipate the most favourable result from the sermon to be preached to-morrow at St. Michael's Chapel, Rev. Doctor ENNIS of Dublin. When we consider the nature of the Prencher, and the strong nature of the cause of 649 Poor Boys, whose cause he advocates, we doubt but the Collection will answer the most sanguine expectations of the Directors.

A sum under Seven Shillings in silver was found near the Police Office, on Thursday, by Mr. Cusker—if lost by a person it will be returned, if not, it shall be added to the city fund.

Savage is again returned to Limerick on his way from Galway to Waterford, with a very extensive selection of cut Glass, from the manufactory, Cork, which will be sold by Auction, &c. at Mr. Swinburne's New Ball—The fixed time will be inserted in our advertising columns in a few days.—From the well known superiority and of the Manufactory, together with the commodious houses for the sale—it will be well deserving of public notice.

Admitted—By the Mayor, John Elrigett, charged with a sheep from Thomas Lloyd, Esq. of Berchmount—on the night, by Alderman Watson, to the City Goal, Margaret, for threatening the life of a woman whom she thought to suspect had caused the apprehension of her Brother—Michael Connell.

Birth—In South Frederick-street, Dublin, the Lady of the Court Lees, Bart. of a son—In Drogheda, the Lady Major Fairtlough, of a daughter—At the Glebe-House, the Lady of John Smith, Esq. saved, the dearest object of the Pastor's wishes was accomplished. This unbounded Devotion on the part of the Priest was repaid by the most steady and affectionate attachment of his Flock, it created for him a mild and powerful control over their conduct. The People readily and joyfully obeyed an authority which rested not upon threats and terrors, but upon the reciprocal exercise of kindness and gratitude.

This profound respect which the Catholics of Ireland invariably maintained towards their Clergy, has been uncommonly beneficial to Society. To this as to a chief cause some of the greatest men in the Country has referred the internal peace it has so long enjoyed. The late lamented Mr. Mulqueen, was among the most active and successful supporters of the tranquility of the neighbourhood around him. It is well known to the people of that place, that he has deprived some of his Parishioners of fire arms which might possibly have been employed in evil purposes, and has prevented many a private and public breach of the laws of the land. This was the incessant exertion of his life; his death, in some measure, tended to secure the same object, by the protection which it gave to the lives of others; and he, on the fatal night we lost him, passed by unnoticed, the unhappy man by whom he was murdered, his own life would have been preserved, but there is much reason to think, that the lives of others would have been lost; while all the country laments the deed that has deprived Religion of an ornament, and Society of a Guardian, I feel myself imperatively bound as Chief Pastor of the Diocese to call upon you by every principle you hold Sacred, by all you owe to your characters, your Country, and your God, to exert yourselves for the preservation of morality and order.

GENUINE christian zeal, impelled by charity and governed by discretion, must operate powerfully towards the suppression of vice; you are surrounded by the strongest encouragements of exertion—I shall not suffer myself to think that any of you will be intimidated by the fate of your fellow labourer. To you, above all men, it belongs not to fear those that kill the body and cannot kill the soul, but rather to fear HIM that can destroy both body and soul in Hell." The good Shepherd, ye know, will not hesitate if necessary, to lay down his life for his Sheep. The least concerns and interest of man are committed to your care; the peace of society, the honour of your holy Religion, and the souls for whose salvation the Son of God expired on a Cross, depend in a great degree on your zeal, and perseverance. You are engaged in a most glorious cause, and you have every reason to hope for success; the prayers of man and the promise of GOD, are with you; you are supported by the majestic authority of Religion, and notwithstanding the late melancholy event, your Flocks will still listen to you with docility and respect.

I therefore entreat you by a more than ordinary exertion, by private and public remonstrance, to seize the opportunities and resources of religion, to protect the morals and peace of your respective Parishes, I entreat you to impress upon your Flocks the unlawful nature and alarming tendency of nocturnal Meetings; to exert incessantly the lower order to give up those destructive arms which cannot be necessary for their preservation and are often employed in acts of vengeance, sedition and blood. I earnestly entreat you to point out to your Flocks how strongly the law of GOD commands submission to the constituted authorities of the land "let every soul be subject to higher powers, for there is no power but from GOD, and those that resist the ordinance of GOD, resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of GOD, and they that resist purchase to themselves damnation." Romans, Chap. 13. You will impress upon them that their own happiness and safety depend upon the submission to the laws of the country excitement—disdaining to take advantage of a feverish prolixism—awaiting the uninfluenced sense of public opinion, and the unbiased award of Legislative approbation. If such conduct be not sufficient to conciliate, surely, something more than human is demanded of us—for we have done every thing within the compass of human propriety, or capacity, to obliterate prejudice and consolidate confidence. It should not, too, be forgotten, that at the period of the Union, the ease and safety with which Emancipation could be granted, was the boon held out to Catholic acquiescence; and it should, likewise, be justly recollected, that that had not the Union taken place, it is almost a moral certainty, that we would not, as now, in nineteen years after that event, have to complain of unrequited loyalty, or unmerited exclusions.

I shall only add, that I hope the Catholics will always be friends to Constitutional Liberty and improvement; spurning those abject political doctrines, once unfairly attributed to them; but guarding themselves, likewise, against the crude extremes of uninformed or intemperate zeal.

The following Resolutions were then proposed by Alan Francis O'Neill, Esq. seconded by Martin Arthur, Esq. and unanimously adopted:—

RESOLVED—That the Penal Laws, which for more than a century, have deprived us of our rights as British subjects, are not only oppressive on a great majority of the people of Ireland, but quite opposite to the principle and spirit of the British Constitution.

That however expedient it might have been then deemed to resort to the adoption of a weak and mischievous policy, the continuance of those laws, on the Statutes of England, cannot be justified in our days by an impeachment of our loyalty, or a want of Catholic exertion to uphold a Constitution, reared, not for the monopoly of some, but for the happiness of all.

That we deem it unnecessary to advert to our participation in all the sacrifices of the British Empire during the late war, but that it is only just to ourselves to fix the attention of Parliament on the present condition of Ireland, which, by the conduct of her people, and the exhortations of her Clergy, breathes submission to the laws and constituted authorities of the Realm.

That, conscious of the justice of our claims, supported as they now are, by a great majority of the liberal and enlightened Protestants of Ireland, we do forthwith prepare and forward Petitions to both Houses of Parliament, praying the total repeal of the Penal Laws—that to the Lords, to be presented by the Most Noble the Marquis of Lansdowne, and our Petition to the Commons, by our County Members; and that a Committee do undertake the management thereof, and do require those distinguished personages may present and support the same.

George Black, Esq. being called to the Chair, the unanimous thanks were voted to Mr. Roche, and the Meeting broke up.

THE SPIAN SOCIETY.

A few posts since, we mentioned that an early day last week had been fixed on for the opening of the Theatre, we find however, that this could not be accomplished, in consequence of Miss Whitakers being obliged to relinquish her engagement with the Society.

It will now be seen by our Advertising Columns, that Wednesday next, is the time appointed. We understand from good authority, that no imputation can possibly attach to the Thespian Society, for Miss O'Neil's not coming to Limerick, as the Gentlemen composing the Committee, abandoned every claim for rent, by offering the House for a Week, provided the receipts of one night were appropriated for Charity. Miss O'Neil has been offered a Charte Blanche, and it now depends entirely on the engagement that Lady may have, whether she favours this Town with her presence
