On Sunday evening, a most excellent and highly impressive discourse from the 4th Chapter of 2d Timothy, 6th, 7th, and 8th verses, was preached by Mr. West, of Clones, at the Methodist Meeting House, Bridge-street, which was hung with Black. Several religious anecdotes were related of our good old King, and the entire composition was most interesting and highly gratifying.

On Saturday night, the turf boat Peggy, of Ballycotton, the property of John Boland, was lost off Foy's Island, on her passage up the Shannon. There were six persons on board, all of whom perished. On the night of Thursday last, a number of ruffians, after committing several outrages, under the assistance of demanding arms, attacked the house of Mr. James Ryan, at Court-Brown, about two miles from Askeaton, in Lower Connelloe, and in consequence of Mr. Ryan's very spirited resistance, burnt his house and offices, in the latter of which two horses were destroyed, besides other property to some amount.

On the night that the party broke into Major Bateman's gardener's house, at Newbridge, in this County, in search of arms, (as mentioned in our last,) the same gang committed several other depredations in that neighbourhood—they attacked the house of a man named Ryan, at Riddlestown, and took his gun—also, the house of man named Connelly, at Kilbredane, into which they fired some shots, and took two guns—from that place they went to the house of William Roche, of Rathfriland, where they also fired some shots, and took a gun—from thence they went to the houses of Michael Nestor, of Kilquean, and Richard Hanlon, of Raghran, and others, where they were equally successful, and in some instances, swore the inhabitants to inform them where guns were kept by others; and our highly respectable correspondent informs us, that as far as he could ascertain, upwards of twenty guns were taken on that night, and concludes his letter by observing, that if the Government is not immediately put to such purposes, by the energy of the Magistrates, that the country will be in a worse state than it is at present.

At the hour on Monday morning, a fire broke out in the Mills of Castlematrix, near Rathkeale, the property of Richard Rose, Esq. which totally consumed the Mills, and gave concern, with a valuable quantity of property.
