

On the Sheriff's entering the room, to the anvil, where he was relieved of his arms, and Madden, came next in succession. Harnett shortly after appeared, supported by Mr. Brown, the Keeper, and one Gentleman, a particular friend. He was in a coat, and had on a foraging cap. He was very debilitated, but was not ironed. The happy men had all their arms pinned, and were in mournful procession to the scaffold. The Ordinary of the Prison leading the procession sang "I see the resurrection and the life, for he that believeth in Me shall never die."

At the fatal drop, the unfortunate were taken in the same order as they came to have their heads cut off. On Madden, whose offence was forging Bank of England Notes, appeared a considerable confusion took place among a immense multitude, and loud cries were heard—"Murder!"—"Shame!" The appearance of Mrs. Price, convicted for the murder of her husband, excited to the feeling of the crowd was excited to more indignant manifestations. Cries—"Murder!" resounded from all quarters. A happy person conducted herself with propriety, and observed that she did not feel any anxiety as to where she was going.—She was dressed in mourning.

In the interval the signal was given, and the execution of these unfortunate beings for ever finished. This is a copy of a letter addressed by Madden to Mr Brown the Keeper:

"Cells, December 5, 1820.
—This is an awful moment to address you. I May Heaven and our God reward you for my greatful thanks for your kindness—your assistance exceeded. Have the goodness to order the disposal of my things, who has my directions.—Farewell, Sir!—Adieu, yours sincerely
"THOS. F. HARNETT."

CLIN—DECEMBER 11.

Several persons are spoken of as likely to succeed in the office of Surveyor-General, amongst whom are Messrs. Cole and others. Several Gentlemen of great probity and high character.

A vessel of Carlow, a few days ago sent to the Queen, the postage of which was £5 19s. British.

A turf boat on her way from Galway, sprung a leak, and went down. There were but two men on board, one clinging to the mast, was picked up, the other, we regret to say, was drowned.

The Justices of the County Carlow held a Court on Thursday, and came to Resolutions to prohibit combinations to increase the wages of labourers, which exist in the County. The Justices have cut off the ears of horses which draw the boats.

WATERFORD BANK—We learn from the papers, that, on account of the increasing difficulties, it was not practicable to strike a dividend on Monday. The dividend is not expected for several days, probably not before the expiration of a fortnight. The decision was deferred upon the Waterford Resolutions until next Saturday.—Waterford in custody, upon the information sworn against him, but the remainder of the party, together with another small detachment of the Police who had been brought in prisoners from other Directions, were marched out of town in about an hour afterwards, and the Magistrate, Alderman Watson, conceiving it necessary to protect them from the violence of the crowd, ordered the High Constable, with a division of the Scots Greys, to escort them to the bounds of the Liberties. Long remains in custody. The wounded men are named Michael Ryan and Michael Connell, and both are in the County Limerick Hospital. Connell is the greatest sufferer.

The following is the only account we received of the affair which happened near Glin, (alluded to in our last):—

"On Thursday last, a party of the Limerick Police, stationed at Glin, consisting of a sergeant and seven men, (by an order of Samuel Harding, Esq. a Magistrate,) attended Mr. Evans, of Glin, to protect the peace, whilst he was distraining his tenants on the lands of Athea, for rent and arrears of rent—the cattle being rescued, a parley took place, wherein the distrained were to have back the cattle; and the Police, conceiving all was settled, were returning to their quarters, when they were most violently attacked by a tumultuous mob, consisting of upwards of 100 men, armed with stones, pitchforks, and clubs, and a few fire arms. After the first volley, the Police were completely disarmed, and beat most barbarously, the fellows leaving three of them as dead, and the other five making their escape. The following day, the tenants of the Knight of Glin, with a great deal of humanity, went for the men who were left behind, and brought them to Glin, mutilated as they were. Every possible attention was paid them by the Knight of Glin. One of the assistants was shot dead on the spot, and two more are stated to have been wounded. The Policemen (Fulton and Mullins) are not expected to recover."

We hear that the party were obliged to take shelter at the Knight of Glin's house, and it is said that the country people have threatened destruction by fire to the entire village of Glin, if they are not permitted to take their vengeance on the Police.

On the night of Wednesday last, a number of armed men went to the dwelling-houses of William Hille and Francis Shaughnessy, both yeomen, living near Pallas Kenry, and deprived them of a gun each. They also attacked the dwelling-house of Michael Walsh, of Shannongrove, and deprived him of his arms, and broke his windows.

In consequence of the disturbed state of the Barony of Kenry, a meeting of Magistrates is to be held this day at Pallas, at which Mr. Goring, Chief Magistrate of Police, will attend.

We refer our readers to the thanks from the Magistrates, &c. to Garrett Rodney Fitz Gerald, Esq. for his spirited conduct in resisting a midnight gang of ruffians, near Ballyneety, as already stated in this Paper.

Colonel Bagwell's extensive breed of Leicester Bows are to be sold by auction on the 15th inst.

illicit malt, and arrested said Spelman destroyed a large distillery of potatoe, containing upwards of 400 gallons, a quantity of singlings, and seized a quantity of which they found fixed for work in a mill, and arrested the proprietor, John Spelman, with the above-named Spelman, and worm, they safely escorted into Galway. Saturday, same party and Officers, Meelick, destroyed a large distillery of a quantity of illicit malt, and seized a worm of a still, which they lodged in a mill, and on the 8th instant, near the village of Galway, they seized a large sail boat, one, each having a quantity of illicit board, which with the boats they sent to Galway.

Mr. Stewart, belonging to the 11th Regiment, whose absence we noticed some time since, was found floating in Banu river on Saturday by a boatman. He was missing for several weeks, and had, when found, his body very heavy trowsers upon him. The wound was much disfigured. An inquest was held on the body by Thomas Ivers, Esq. and a verdict of "Drowned himself in a mill race" was returned.

We trust the very liberal allowance made by his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, in favour of Capt. D'Alton's corps, for his resistance to the ruffians who attempted to deprive him of his arms, will stimulate others to behave with equal resolution and courage. He has been granted a pension for life, and received £200 in advance! A subscription was also entered into by the trades and Gentlemen of the neighbourhood, for the purpose of purchasing a Six-mile-bridge, for the purpose of relieving the poor of the parish of Galway.

On Monday night, three young thieves, with the assistance of an instrument, cut through two silk handkerchiefs from a shop in the street, by pulling them thro' the opening of the window sash, through which they were fastening the shutters. They were observed by a person passing by, who endeavoured to secure the stolen goods, but the thieves escaped.

Last night the shop window of Messrs. George's-Street was broken by some persons before the watch were set, and a quantity of goods taken away—Two of them have since been recovered by Mr. Benson, High Constable, and the articles found with them.

The Ash-Hill Fox Hounds, will hunt at Castle Covers, on Wednesday, the 11th inst., and shake a Sporting Fox, at Barna Goss-Cover, and on Monday, the 12th, will hunt a Fox, near Claghogue. In addition to the property of Messrs. and Kennedys, advertised in our paper on Monday next, the following Polteries are to be sold at same time:
