The strict and punctual integrity; the undeviating principle which regulated his conduct during the long period of sixty years, are too well known to his friends and to a respectable portion of the public, to stand in need of any panegyric. The sorrow which his friends and relatives naturally feel for his loss is, however, considerably softened by the reflection, that he departed this life in the fulness of time, and at an age rarely exceeded; as well as the remembrance, that, from his youth to the extreme verge of human life, he preserved the character of an honest man.—At Mount Pleasant, Renagh, in his 10th year, Mr. Alexander Stevenson, son of the late Mr. John Stevenson, of St. Andrews-street, Dublin.—On Thursday last, at Carrig-a-Foyle Castle, Co. Patrick Nolan.—Last night, in Patrick-street, Mrs. White, relict of the late Henry White, Esq. of Green-bath, County Tipperary.
