

The reported reductions in the Army are a considerable reduction will certainly take place, but nothing has yet been decided.

On Wednesday, there was another Field Day, and a Sham Battle in the Phoenix Park, Dublin, preparatory to the Grand Review which will take place during his Majesty's visit to this country.—There were 10 Regiments of the line, including the Royal Artillery, viz. :—The 3d and Enniskillen Dragoons; 12th and 19th Lancers—Infantry, 23d Fusiliers; 33d Regiment, 51 Light Infantry Regiment, 52d ditto, 8th Highland Regiment, and the Royal Artillery. The uncommon fineness of the day, with the surrounding scenery, added much to the interest and brilliancy of this grand spectacle. The advance and retreat of the contending regiments excited a very lively interest, and the rapid charges of the cavalry upon the solid masses of infantry, gained universal admiration. The Commander of the Forces appeared, as if in presence of his Majesty, at the head of the troops; there were also present Generals Lord Aylmer, Sir C. Grant, Sir G. Airey, Wolfe, &c. Lords Kilmarnock and Blaney were also on the ground. General Sir Benjamin Bloomfield appeared at the close of the day in plain clothes. The troops were to have been in the Park at 10 o'clock in the morning, but in consequence of the rain they were countermanded until two. At the conclusion the troops formed in their original position, and then advanced in line, in open order, with their different bands playing; when halted a general salute took place, the bugles and bands playing God save the King; after which each regiment fired one round, and returned to their different quarters.

On the day of his Majesty's Coronation, the Officers of the 93d Highlanders, stationed in Cork, presented each man of the Regiment with a shilling to drink his Majesty's health. They spent the evening in the most joyous manner, and illuminated the Barracks.

The 88th or Connaught Rangers are to occupy the late quarters of the 77th Regiment at Stockport; the 29th Regiment are to replace the 88th.

The 26th Regiment, coming home from Gibraltar, has been in that fortress for upwards of ten years. The 75th, from the Ionian Islands, will relieve them. Our military force in the Mediterranean consists of eight Regiments, independent of the four at Gibraltar.

A small part of the 15th at Halifax is expected in England daily.

DEATH OF MR. HOSKINS.

We have this day a melancholy task in stating that this respected young Gentleman died of his wounds on Wednesday last!

A Meeting of Magistrates and Gentlemen took place in Newcastle on Wednesday, and Rewards to a considerable amount, have been offered for the discovery of the horrid murderer. Judicious arrangements have also been made, which, we trust, will have the desired effect.

This most atrocious murder was planned with the greatest precision, and executed with the most brutal and relentless barbarity, as appears by the following particulars:—

"This unoffending, innocent youth, of sixteen years of age, amiable in his manners and deportment to all, and universally esteemed, was waylaid by several villains in the middle of the day on the road between Abbeyfeale and Newcastle at different stations within a short distance of each other. The two first, from under the arch of a bridge, having fired without effect, the next two, from a rising ground, shot him in the thigh and arm, and his horse in the shoulder, which brought him to the ground; when two others, starting up before him on the road, and firing, without effect, he fled up the mountain to two men for protection, one of whom fired at the instant he sunk upon his knees to implore for mercy, and the others, coming behind him, fractured his skull by five several blows of the butt-end of their muskets—when, falling senseless, one of the monsters thrust the muzzle of a gun to his back, and fired a shot into his body. Under these accumulated wounds, with fifteen slugs and balls in his body, he languished in great pain and suffering for five days, and then expired."

The Sessions of Rathkeale terminated yesterday. There was no criminal case of any particular consequence, and the general business was extremely light. There were two cases of Ejectment before the Court, which excited considerable interest, and in which the Trustees of Lord Courtney were Plaintiffs, and Robert Carte, Esq. Defendant. In the year 1814, Mr. Courtney, Heir Apparent, and then Agent to the Trustees of the Estates, was in the country, and had full authority to grant leases on their behalf—he at that time received and accepted a proposal from the Defendant, for twenty-two acres of land, near Newcastle, and gave orders to have Mr. Carte put into possession, on which he made some considerable improvements, and continued a punctual tenant to the

A private letter, dated V... The young Duke of Reich (leon) has not yet put on mourning of his father. When he left the Empress, who took great interest by degrees, the young Prince and very amiable, was much wept. It is said that there will be a funeral service for Bonaparte at which his son will be present the whole of the day with the Emperor exceedingly attached to him accompanied him to-day in the gardens of Schoenbrunn.

A letter from an English paper on the Continent says—"The Emperor is less impressed with the death of we were; they, as well as more about the Queen of France, that they will who pipes."

A letter from St Helena on the death of Bonaparte, the funeral, and his choice of which we have already "Inclosed with him" in the urn containing his heart, and his stomach, and all the during his reign; together a spoon, and one plate, of heart before it was sold was permitted to me as a pall at the funeral was of which Bonaparte wore at and on the head of the crucifix.
