 at half past three o'clock, three or four of mounted on horses arrived, bearing the of the unfortunate misguided people who body was thrown on a horse before one no rode behind. The sight of a wretched who came to so untimely an end, naturally degree of horror, however necessary and amples may be on so alarming an occasion; blood brills at this moment within my veins, the impression which such a sight made on body appeared to be that of rather a young an, for it was almost impossible to distingree of accuracy; he was without a shoe with scarcely a coat to his back. The sol-in this body left town immediately again, al more were killed and wounded; and at r departure that the firing still continued.
