DEATHS.

On Thursday last, at Portlaoine, her residence, in the County Galway, Mrs. Freuch, lady of Francis French, Esq., and sister to Messrs. Russell, Bankers, of this City. She was the uniform promulgator of virtue, the prototype of innocence, the exemplar of the duty of conjugal affection, of the afflicted, and the support of the distressed; not only her own country, but to a circle widely diffused around the place of her residence. Though impelled by the native excellence of her heart—though looking to a purer country, and exalted by pure motives (which temporal reward yet has experienced) she has before the most gratifying acknowledgments of her worth. In a remote part of the country—in the midst of a crowded and impoverished population, late, toils, or locks, were unnecessary, and scarcely ever used for the protection of her mansion and property—for those whom she relieved, by day, guarded her stores, and watched her interests by night, more effectively than any other species of security could supply. Of such a character, the poor how severe the loss—to the acquaintance how sincere the regret—and to her husband, relations, and friends, how painful and afflictive the separation!—but, to herself, how glorious the reward!—she died, at the age of 84, on Monday, at her own house, Ballyvaughan, yesterday, Mr. John Binton.

At Abington, on Saturday morning, Miss Margaret Ryan, sister of the late Mr. Ryan, of the County of Wick.
In Dublin, John Parr, Esq., Counsel for the Co. Wicklow, at Marston, Edin, wife of Doctor M<sup>r</sup> Sayer.
Jane, second daughter of Morgan Crofton, Esq., of Dublin, On Bachel's Quay, Cork, Mr. John Backett.
In Waterford, the lady of Mr. John Allen, Surgeon.
In London, John Burt, Esq., one of the Clerks to the Treasurer of His Majesty's Navy.
