DEATHS.

Yesterday in Upper William-street, Mr. Charles Magee, spirit retailer
 At Rathkeale, on Saturday last, Mr. Henry Thos. Carter.
 He bore a long and painful illness with pious resignation, and died much lamented. The Members of Lodge, 305, of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, together with the Brethren of the Rifle Brigade, in full masonic costume, attended his remains to the grave, and paid the last tribute of respect to their departed Brother. The funeral service was performed by the Rev. Archdeacon Warburton in the most solemn and impressive manner.
 Tuesday, in Ennis, after an illness of two months, Mrs.
 Scott, wife of Richard Scott, Esq. Attorney at Law. To detail the many good acts which marked the conduct and character of this much lamented Lady, would be only sounding in the ear of all those who knew and heard of her, what they were perfectly acquainted with before; therefore, to the stranger we will say, that without an exception, a more worthy, amiable, and philanthropic woman, the light of this world scarcely ever closed on—society lost its ornament, the orphan its protector, and many poor house-keepers their chief support. What she gave came from a charitable heart inand, not from any expectation of a reward in this uncertain world; but she is now gone where the sure reward awaited her—leaving a disconsolate husband and child to lament her loss, to whom she was all that could be required.
 On Wednesday, Henrietta, only child of Mr. Pat. T. Ryan, Apothecary

In Ennis, Mr. James Lysaght.
 In Dublin, Wat. Mahon, Esq. of Gort.
 At Portobello, Captain Thomas Cunningham, Royal Navy.
 Of typhus fever, the Rev. R. Baguell, Parish Priest of Kilshee, County Longford.
 In Rolton-street, Dublin, Mr. John Grace, chandler.
 In Cork, Mrs. Croshie, wife of Mr. James Croshie.
 Near Crookhaven, Miss Dowe, daughter of J. Dowe, Esq.
 Miss Gould, daughter of the late Henry Gould, Esq. of Cork, and sister of Sir George Gould, Bart. of Oldcourt.
 In South King-street, Dublin, Andrew Walsh, Esq. of Stedalt, County Meath.
 At Rockfield, County Kerry, Lieut. John Eager, half-pay 31st Regiment.
 At Newport, Isle of Wight, on the 27th ult. aged 39, Edmond O'Leary, Esq. M. D. Physician to the Forces, and Principal Medical Officer at Albany Barracks. On Thursday, his mortal remains were interred at Carisbrooke, with military honors—on no occasion, perhaps, has a melancholy spectacle so imposing been witnessed by the inhabitants of this Island. The rank of the deceased—the high estimation in which he was universally held—his sudden transition from an apparently well-founded assurance of many years of health, to the forgetfulness of the grave—his unbounded zeal in the performance of the important duties entrusted to his care—his well known humanity—the unsophisticated and ingenuous disposition of his heart—the warmth and disinterestedness of his friendship, all gave a character and interest to the mournful, that neither wealth nor rank could, of themselves, have created. He had only been fifteen months in Medical charge Albany Depot.
 In South America, George William Dubouardieu, Captain of Grenadiers in the Legion del Anticquin, in the Service of the Spanish Patriots.
 At Plympton, Horatio Nelson, aged 23, eldest son of Lieut-
