There are questions on which honest men, having the same object ultimately in view, must agree to differ: and the question of the Bible Society is, in my judgment, one of them.—I have the honour to be, Sir, Your very faithful and obedient Servant,
JOHN LIMERICK.

The Limerick Chronicle

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 20.

Yesterday, the Right Worshipful D. F. G. Mahony, Mayor, as Coroner, held an Inquisition on the body of Johanna Mc'Inerney, who had been bathing on Sunday morning, above Thomond-Bridge, but going beyond her depth, was carried off by the rapidity of the current over the mill-wheel, and drowned. Her remains were found on Monday on the shore near Cunnegar Creek. It appeared on the examination taken before his Worship, that the most praiseworthy exertions were made to save her life by John Pace, a private in the Light Company of the 29th Regt. who, when he perceived her in the river opposite the sallyport of the Castle Barracks, plunged, with his clothes on, into the water, and although he caught hold of her arm, the impetuosity of the stream forced her from his grasp, and she sunk in a few moments. Verdict—"Accidental death by drowning." We understand that the unfortunate female was to have been married in a few days.

Monday, at two o'clock, Patrick Iris, of Askeaton, convicted at the County Assizes, of attacking the dwelling of Lancelot Sands, Esq. at Mount Pleasant, underwent the awful sentence of the law, at the front of the County Jail.—The wretched man was 58 years of age, quite grey, and seemed to meet his fate with becoming fortitude. Previous to the fatal minute that was to take his soul to the presence of his God, he requested the Rev. Mr. O'Halloran, who zealously ministered every spiritual comfort to the unfortunate man since his conviction, to address a few words to the assembled multitude as from him. Mr. O'Halloran feelingly told them that he was instructed by the sufferer before them to say, that to drink he chiefly attributed the cause of his untimely end; he therefore beseeched them as they valued their characters and lives, to abstain from the excessive use of spirituous liquors—it was his misfortune that he had not done so. Mr. O'Halloran then said, that Ivis acknowledged the justice of his sentence, having been at the attack on Mr. Sandes' house; but that he owed it to his character to deny that he had ever planned that attack, or been the chief instigator on the unfortunate occasion; on the contrary, the plan was got up by the informer, Sheehan, who swore away his life; he also denied that any species of force or compulsion was used to oblige the party to go there—and he firmly denied what Sheehan swore as to Ivis's having said, that if they did not shoot Mr. Sands they had no business to shew their faces to him again—all this he denied to be true; but he now forgave Sheehan from the bottom of his heart. Mr. O'Halloran then impressed upon the multitude the necessity of obedience to the laws, and the evidence they then had before them of the folly of placing any confidence in each other in a bad cause. Mr. O'Halloran's address seemed to make a very deep impression on the crowds below, and in a short time after the unfortunate man was taken to the gaol.

The wise principles, and honest practices, pursued by the CORPORATION of the ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE during a period extending a Century—their consequent accumulation of riches and reputation—their unwavering liberality, have secured to this Establishment the highest character among the Insurance Institutions of the Empire; and secured for it a corresponding public confidence—and that in an extent of business, in this country, unattained by any other Company.

The Persons Insured at this Office do not depend upon an uncertain fund or contribution—give neither subject themselves, nor liable by Acts of Parliament, to undergo the Losses which may happen—the real Capital Stock of the Corporation being an unquestionable Security to be Assured.
