We are sorry to say, that a faithful servant lost his life in this County on Wednesday night.
 To those acquainted with the mild and amiable character of John Cantillon Heffernan, Esq. it will be sufficient to say, that the melancholy mistake has been keenly felt by none more than Mr. Heffernan. Assassination being the order of the day, and the circumstance of Mr. Heffernan's having been previously threatened, made him doubly alert. The recital of the following has been afforded us by a person who attended the Coroner's Inquest:—

On Wednesday evening, between eight and nine o'clock, John Cantillon Heffernan, of Manister, having occasion to go into his garden, on his return to the house, through the shrubbery, he saw a person lurking in it, and Mr. Heffernan called several times to him to stand and tell his business, on which the fellow retreated. Mr. H. got out of the garden and, joined by his servant boy, whom he left at the hall-door, went down the lawn by the side of the shrubbery, continuing to call to the man therein to surrender himself, which call of Mr. H. and his boy on being heard by Mr. Funnell and Mr.
 Dwyer, who were sitting in the parlour, they ran to Mr. H.'s assistance; when the fellow that was in the shrubbery heard those Gentlemen come out, he retreated to the corner of the shrubbery to get over the ditch, but the servant having got thereon and Mr. H. having advanced into the shrubbery, the man lay concealed and Mr. H. sent Mr. Dwyer in for his guns, where Mr. H. and Mr. F. and the servant continued calling out to the man in the shrubbery to surrender and account for himself. When Mr. D. returned with the guns he gave one to Mr. H. On the female servant's return to the kitchen, she told Wm. London, (who was groom and confidential servant of Mr. H.) that his master was attacked and the fire-arms were gone out, on which London ran out calling on the other servants to follow him to his master's assistance — he, London, having passed to the rear of Mr. H. along the ditch of the shrubbery, got out of it just at the corner the fellow lay concealed in. Mr. H. conceiving London to be the lurking fellow from his having come from the corner of the shrubbery, and not being aware of his being out, called to him several times not to run and to give himself up, or that he would fire on him—London continued running towards the ditch to prevent the concealed fellow from getting over, never conceiving that he was the person repeatedly called to, did not reply, and just as he London was going to jump on the ditch, Mr. H. fired and shot him through the top of the shoulder. On it being ascertained who was shot Mr. H. being inconsolable was brought in, and the servant remained with London while assistance and light was getting to bring him in, and they heard the lurking fellow escape over the ditch.
 It is hoped the fellow will be yet discovered, as it is a melancholy thing that the honest faithful London should be shot, through the darkness of the night, in endeavouring to assist his master. A Coroner's Inquest was yesterday held by Mr.
 James Bennett. John Crips and Villiers Peacocke, Esqs.
 Magistrates, also attended, with several respectable Gentlemen; and a verdict returned that the deceased came by his death by a gun-shot wound he received in a mistake for the lurking fellow that was about the house of Manister.

On Wednesday, a Petty Sessions was held at Shanagolden, at which the following Magistrates were present:—The Knight of Gliv, Chairman; John Bateman, Robert Peppard, Godfrey Massy, George M. Maunsell, Richard William Yielding, Rev. George Vincent, Thomas P.
 Vokes, Samuel Harding, and G. Blennerhassett.
 They investigated several cases, connected with
