 On Tuesday morning, at Garymona, in the County of Clare, aged 19, Francis, eldest son of the late James M'Namara, Esq. The premature death of this amiable youth has inflicted a deep wound upon the feelings of a family who looked at him as on the eve of being a husband to the widow, and a father to the orphan; and by those who knew him his excellent disposition will be long remembered.
 At Ballibrado, County Tipperary, Justin M'Carthy, Esq.

 In Clonmel, on Thursday last, Mrs. Worrall, wife of a Rev. James Worrall, Minister of the Presbyterian Conge-gation of Clonmel. In recording the death of this worthy Gentlewoman, we participate in the regret, that many all feel on an event that at once deprives an affectionate husband and family of the best of wives and mothers, and consigns to the grave the parent, who recently devoted her health and her years to prolong these of her amiable son, who died life was most desirable and full of expectation. Mrs.
 Worrall was in every respect a most exemplary character, and will be regretted by all who hold unostentatious civi-and the domestic virtues in due estimation.

 In Cork, Mr. R. Magrath.
 At Leighorn, Lieut. Stephen Rudeliff, R. N. son of the Rev.
 Stephen Rudeliff, Rector of Skryne, Diocese of Meath.

We regret much to have to announce the death of a truly pious and venerable Prelate, the Right Rev. Doctor Archdeacon, which took place at an early hour on Thursday morning, at his apartments in this town, (Galway). He has been upwards of twenty years Roman Catholic Bishop of the United Diocese of Kilmacough and Kilsenora, County Clare; and it may be justly said of him, that to the last moments of his life, he endeavoured to promote, amongst all sects and denominations, those principles of cordi-and brotherly love, which become us all as Christians and Irishmen. To the most pure and unaffected piety, Doctor Archdeacon added a fund of ability and intellectual accomplements which is not to be exceeded in the Irish Hierarchy.
 Religious without being morose, he never forgot the sympany and urbanity of the Gentleman in discharging the duties of the Apostle, but earned for himself, while living, the esteem and respect of all—now dead, their unfeigned respect
