THE DUBLIN
EVENING STAR.

ON MONDAY next, the 9th Instant. (not on Thursday the 5th, as first announced.) will be Published, the first number of the new Daily Newspaper,

THE EVENING STAR.
Beautiful Founts of Type intended for this Journal were ordered the day before yesterday evening, per the Luca, King, Master, although every exertion had been made to accomplish their earlier arrival; so far indeed, as the boats could contribute to this object, they were sent. The Types were forwarded to Liverpool from a foundry, nearly a fortnight ago, by a most expensive conveyance, and were immediately embarked; but adverse winds interrupted their reception, notwithstanding, until yesterday. The Proprietor of THE STAR, preferring to disappoint the public in the Paper itself, to disappointing them in any expectations from it, by such a crude and precipitation, as would be consequent on this late arrival of types which are not yet landed, determines to wait until the arrival of every particular of his mechanical, as well as other arrangements. These arrangements will be finished on MONDAY next, the 9th Instant, and on that day THE EVENING STAR will certainly appear.
