DEATHS.

On Wednesday morning, at his Father's house in Henry-street, after a tedious and painful illness, Thomas, only son of Major Collis, of this City—a youth possessed of every virtue which could endear him to his family, and numerous acquaintance. The fortitude, resignation, and Christian triumph that he evinced at the closing scene of his life, can never be erased from the hearts of his afflicted Parents and sorrowing friends. Of him it may be truly said, that death had lost its sting—his dying words were, that God had given him to know that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. Thus this happy Christian's soul took its flight to the bosom of his Father and his God.
