

We have seen a Letter, in a Limerick Paper of Saturday, signed "Thomas Cull, Curate of St. Michael's," in which that Reverend Gentleman very unceremoniously ventures to assail our Establishment. Indeed, the attack is so violent, that in its fury it loses its sting, and hence we would be disposed to pass it by in pity, or, were we to indulge in any of his feelings, in utter contempt, were we not, in charity, obliged to check the petulance of this young man. His main charge against us, arises from our having given in the Chronicle of Wednesday, a Letter signed "Veritas;" and, forsooth, for doing our duty, which we would equally do (and have done) by him, he bristles up all his ire, and, with a meekness peculiar to himself, accuses our decline! Poor little man! When commencing a tirade against all the false statements of Veritas, (as he calls them,) why so prodigal of his own veracity? When he now learns from us, what every one in this City but this young man already knows, that we print nearly as many papers as all the Journals in the South of Ireland put together—how can he account for the unblushing falsehood with which a Minister of Religion commences a refutation of falsehoods? In giving Veritas, were this young man not invincibly ignorant, he ought to know that an Editor has nothing to do with the principles of his Contributors, and were it not so, Cameleon-like, the Press should alter its hue with every paragraph it inserts. We thank this young man for his advice to us; but we stand on an eminence, to which, notwithstanding the notoriety he wishes to acquire, he has not reached as yet; and this gives us a view of the relative bearings of society in this Country, beyond the horizon of his narrow conception. But were he serious, and that he intended to influence us, he should have set us a salutary example—he should have written in the meek spirit of a Christian Divine, instead of wooing us with the spurs of a game-cock; but, by such an assailant, our Journal shall never be intimidated from giving to our Correspondents the privilege of being heard. The various Rell-gions of our Country, however we may differ with some, we hold in respect; and although this young man, screening himself behind his Ministry, attempts to sling javelins at us, that his cloth or his means will not allow us to grapple with, it will not alter our respect for that to which he belongs; and, to convince him of our sincerity, we will balance his kind monition by telling him, that in the pulpit or in the press, he will render his Religion more substantial service by substituting a share of those social charities it is his duty to inculcate, for the ill-timed zeal that a heated imagination would swell into Religion, but which invariably contributes to lessen its influence, by weakening the respect its followers would otherwise entertain for a discreet and prudent Shepherd.

Lord and Lady Ennismore arrived on Saturday at Swinburn's, from Ballinruddery, the seat of the Knight of Kerry, and departed on Sunday, for Convamore, County Cork. Sunday last, an Ordination was held at the Cathedral by the Lord Bishop of Limerick, by whom an excellent sermon was preached. The following were admitted into Deacons' orders, Messrs. Thomas Croker, Arthur Blennerhassett Rowan, John Lindsay Gault, and Francis Blake Woodward—and the following into Priests' orders, Messrs. Thomas Westropp, Thomas Exham Hiffernan, and John Walsh. Yesterday, the Bishop of Limerick left the See House to hold his Visitation at Tralee, on to-morrow.

The Bishop of Cloyne confirmed 300 persons at Fermoy Church, on Sunday so'night; and on Wednesday, 111 at Mitchelstown. A very numerous and respectable Meeting was held at the Court-house, Mallow, on Wednesday.

Monday night last, a large party of Rockites assembled on the lands of Ballyculhane, the property of Montiford Westropp, Esq. and destroyed nearly 20 tons of hay, the produce of seven acres, by throwing it into the water. The farm had been set that day to a new tenant, the former being ejected for non-payment of rent.

The house of Michael Creagh, Esq. of Kilbrack, near Doneraile, was attacked on Saturday night by a party of ruffians, who, on finding Mr. Creagh determined to resist, damped, after smashing the windows of the dwelling with stones.

On Sunday, Denis O'Brien, guard of the Waterford Mall, was unfortunately killed by falling off the coach and the wheel striking him on the back, near Pailis-Green; he lived only two hours.

O'Neill, the driver of the Waterford Coach, who murdered his wife, as stated in our last, was found dead in his cell at Clonmel Gaol, on Monday, having poisoned himself on that morning.

A young lad belonging to the Maria, of London, merchant vessel, lying at Waterford, fell overboard, on Monday, and was drowned.

Last night, the premises of Mr. Burd, Pawnbroker, in the North Abbey, Cork, were totally consumed by fire; no lives were lost.

A woman was accidentally shot at Mountshannon, County Galway, on Monday evening.

The Mayor, Aldermen Sir C. Marrett and D. F.-G. Mahony, with the Hon. John Massy, and William Roche, Esq. presided at the Petty Sessions this day. A woman was brought forward, who was detected yesterday in the act of selling spirits in the square of the New Barracks. The Mayor, after a salutary admonition upon the serious nature of the offence she had committed, to which the law attached a penalty of £5, ordered her to be discharged, as the Military Authorities did not press a conviction.

Nineteen persons, from the Liberties, were summoned before the Court, for allowing their dogs to go at large upon the public roads without muzzles, the penalty for which is 10s. Several were fined in the mitigated sum of 10d. which was paid; as the Bench was unwilling, for a first offence, to visit a heavier penalty. The Court was adjourned to Saturday.

Michael Murnane, Bart. Lourigan, Michael Corbet, Dan. Duggan, Jas. Murnane, Laurence Lourigan and Jas. Cussen, for assaults, were convicted this day at the Quarter Sessions, before the Assistant Barrister, and sentenced to confinement and hard labour at the tread mill.

Mr. Kelly, Inspector of Fisheries, at Castle-Connell Petty Sessions, on Tuesday last, had a Fisherman convicted for having salmon in his possession, contrary to law.

Roger Ryan, a labourer in Stein and Brown's Distillery, on Sunday last incautiously descended with a candle into a large vat which had been unused for some time.—The foul air within instantly ignited from communication with the candle, and blazed most furiously about the unfortunate man, who was most dreadfully scorched in every part of his body.—In this hopeless state he was conveyed to the County Infirmary, where his recovery is doubtful.

We have devoted a considerable space to the adjudications at Ballinacloe Fair, which will be read with interest by amateurs in agricultural pursuits.

Committed by the Mayor, to the City Gaol, Patrick M'Inerney, sky-farmer, charged by a Coroner's Inquest with aiding in the murder of James M'Mahon.

To the Editor of the Limerick Chronicle.

SIR—When I wrote a hasty line to you on Saturday, stating that six-pence a man had been stopped from the workmen at the Bridge, I did not tell you by whom or by whose authority it was done, as I could not learn—I am induced to make this observation from what has since come to my knowledge, that a qualified affidavit, denying the circumstance, has been made before a Magistrate, so as to do justice to the poor men. I am, Sir, I am not what Mr. This
