CHARITABLE APPEAL.—The kind-hearted and well-disposed, never had a fairer opportunity of adding a laurel to the immortal wreath of glory that attends that noble virtue of charity, than by coming forward to rescue from utter starvation, a very respectable and once opulent and independent old lady, and her faithful servant, who are in the greatest possible distress, (as can be well attested by several witnesses who visited this lady's mansion; when all the emblems of gentility combined with industry, religion, and morality, at once arrest the eye.)—any, the smallest, contribution will be most thankfully received, and kindly acknowledged by the Editor of this Journal, who will hand it to the poor sufferers, and endeavour to restore at least languishing life and promote comfort.
