

The Insolvent Court on Monday before Commissioners Parsons and Burrowes, Jeremiah Livingston, a Parson and Adjutant on half-pay, (£78) of the Glen-Light Infantry, was brought up to be discharged, and was opposed at great length on the part of Mrs. Anne Livingston and Arthur Hovenden. The Court finally granted his petition and ordered him to be remanded—his petition was offered to be withdrawn if he would give £30 a year out of his pension, towards paying his two creditors, but he declined—It appears he took advantage of the Act three times before.

In the same Court, Thomas Cullen and Thomas Byrne, Parson and Adjutant, were opposed and remanded for nine months.

Commission terminated on Friday, when the following sentences were pronounced and ruled:—W. Geary, for highway robbery—sentence of death was read against him. It was understood that his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant will commute it to transportation; Thomas Byrne, found guilty of a riot and of uttering base coin, twelve months' imprisonment; Patrick Daigan, for uttering base coin, seven years' transportation; Joseph O'Connell, publishing indecent prints, twelve months' imprisonment; Alexander M'Kernan and Edward Connelley, twelve months' imprisonment; Michael Smith, for uttering base coin, seven years' transportation; Hugh O'Connell, felony of sheep, twelve months' imprisonment; Whelan, felony of sheep, seven years' transportation; Bridget Handbidge, uttering base coin, twelve months' imprisonment. The Court adjourned to the 31st of the month.

The ship Thomas, Captain Frazer, now at Cove, on the execution of her voyage to New South Wales, is commanded by the celebrated New Zealand Chief, Tippahu Cupa, of the Quarterly Review of last October, p. 314, which distinguished notice. This warlike native of the northern hemisphere, has experienced some hospitable reception in the neighbourhood of Passage, at one gentleman's house displayed a courtesy and politeness at dinner, which could not have disgraced European nobility. He is an instance of the happy effects of that civilization which the Church Missionary Society has so loudly proclaimed in his fertile Island, where, to a very late period human flesh has been considered a great delicacy. Yesterday last, Tippahu attended at Cove Church, and his demeanour was in every respect agreeable to the habits of civilized life.

Within the last few days, the weather has set in very severe, with rain, wind, and occasional sleet, and the mountains in the neighbourhood are covered with snow.

The public attention cannot be too strongly drawn to the novel but successful mode of growing potatoes mentioned in the Chronicle of Saturday. A similar experiment was made in the vegetable garden of Mr. Wybrants, of Miltown, in this County. In the latter end of April last, three potatoe shoots, about four inches in length, were taken from the pit and planted under a covering of two or three inches of garden mould; they were allowed to remain without any further cultivation until the first of this month, when one hundred and thirty-six potatoes were obtained—two parts of which were of the largest size, the remainder not unusually small. From the result of this experiment, made in a season so unusually dry as the last was, we should be inclined to think that some other undiscovered cause, rather than that which has been specified, led to the failure of it when first made by Mr. Maunsell. Three whole potatoes were at the same time planted in Mr. Wybrant's garden, and the produce was inhabitants with so inconceivable preservation of their lives could be the vessels in the river, a number of which, namely, the Concorde of N. Shields, together with the Concorde—others were fortunate who had attacked them.

At Douglstown, scarcely an hour after the fire, which swept off the summit with it, leaving but time for the shore, and there by means of the logs, or any article however small, endeavouring to escape, and the numbers of men, women, and children, in some parts of the town all destroyed, or suffered in many places has been parched in the streets of provision to speak of the flames. The hurricane raged in large bodies of timber on fire, and parts of the flaming current to the river with amazing rapidity, reflecting the water in such large quantities of salmon and hundreds of which were scattered in the N. and S. W. branches.
