At Athlone, Serjeant-Major Ridewood, of the 84th Regiment, sincerely lamented by his Colonel, Officers, and fellow-soldiers.

On Monday last, at his house in Carlow, Charles Thorpe, Esq. in the 73d year of his age. The remains of this amiable man, who had been cashier to the Bank of Ireland for more than 14 years, were escorted to Rutland Church, by a very numerous cortege of our townsmen.—Many Freemasons (of which body the deceased was a distinguished member) attended on this solemn occasion. At Middleton, Doctor Nagle.

On Saturday last, at Bakerstown, County Tipperary, Miss Lidwill, eldest daughter of Major Lidwill. Never did the unsparring hand of death press a more lovely blossom. She was all her fond parents could wish or anticipate. In her the most superior talents were combined with truly fascinating manners, and knowledge far surpassing what could be expected from her tender age.

At her house, Belvedere, Bath, Mrs. Nugent, relict of the late John Nugent, Esq. of Epsom, and daughter of the late Garret Nagle, Esq. of Ballyduff, County Cork. Exalted by every virtue that adorns her sex, endowed with a combination of personal beauties, that amiable and lovely woman at once gained the esteem, respect and admiration, of all who saw and knew her, and will be long and deeply lamented by an extensive circle of mourning children, relatives and friends, whose only consolation for such an irreparable loss, is, their hope in "Jesus"—(that from the virtuous life she led in this world, her fulfilment of every relative Christian duty and meek submission, under bodily infirmity, to the Will of her Heavenly Father,) that she is now enjoying Life and Glory everlasting amongst "the just made perfect"—and though lost to sight will ever be to memory dear.
