

Upon every occasion that presented to his arrival in Galway, he has conducted his manner that has called forth the highest admirahis activity and soldier-like conduct. Whenever al fires have occurred, we have observed him, as ing the efficient services of his officers and men, but absolutely labouring himself as intensely most active person under his command, and it if he were about preserving his own individual . During the election, too, the people will not forget his coolness and humanity; and we have t but that if he were armed with magisterial au-during that calamitous period, a single life might be sacrificed. It is such a man as this that deserving of public thanks; but whether they conveyed to him formally or not, he may rely that he will leave Galway with the regret, the and the respect of every individual in it.—*Gal-
