the favorite child of his adoption. Miss Holmes, in the part of Annette, evinced some very interesting traits; but this young Lady would succeed admirably, if she could infuse a little portion of spirit and animation into her characters. She gave " the dashing White Serjeant" in excellent style, and with a very engaging naivete. Tho' her voice is not uniformly indicative of great power and compass, yet, it is evident, that taste and cultivation have not been idly pursued. Mr. M'Carthy's personation of Young Contrast-the exquisite fop of fashion-the spoiled child of fortune-elicited loud and unqualified applause. His dress, action, and delivery, suited exactly with the pretensions of this amusing but disappointed non-descript. The performance, last night, was Rob Roy M'Gregor, and Rosins. finer specimen of acting. Mr. Jones, and Miss Ediniston, made a capital hit in their respective characters; both displayed an excellent conception of the celebrated author, and the effect produced was equal to the romantic feeling and noble energy of the originals. Sinclair was never more happy as in " John Anderson, my Joe," and the " Bonny Breast knots," told three times over, un invitation more honoured in the breach than the observance. This is the last night of his engagement.

DEATHS.

At her father's, in Newenham-street, on Saturday, Maria, daughter of Joseph Cox, Esq. of Mount-Pleasant. By the sudden removal of this amiable female, her family are bereft of a dutiful child, an affectionate sister, and a sincere friend-unostentatious in her piety, she sought not the applause of the world, but from a deep conviction of her unworthiness, she walked humbly with her God; her sorrowing family, while they mourn their loss, are enabled to bow with pious resignation, knowing that their beloved one has been called for by min who lent her to them, and that she is now safely sheltered within His Almighty arms.
