Editor of the Limerick Chronicle. Kilkenny, Friday, July 13th 1827.

Looking over your last publication I was amused at reading some stupid commentary in the Limerick Evening Post, which last to give rise to—I see nothing in worth but would beg leave to refer the author to lately read in the Chronicle, signed T. L. which it was proved to a demonstration, the Hospital would stand, though single could not be received from that part the most interested in its support.

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant HUGHES RUSSELL.

Editor of the Limerick Chronicle

I hope that you will, in your valuable place to the following observations, which liberty to offer, as much in justice to the Editor in reference to my own feelings on this subject. A Gentleman has lately thought proper to publish, sentiments (or doctrines) which I think it enough for me to say, they are entirely false: that (in regard to Indulgences) the Church possesses the power to grant heretics, and that "the end justifies the means."

such gross misrepresentations do not derive their authority, but as I must suppose that the Editor advances such opinions if he did not fully believe in them, I respectfully beg to undeceive him (if he is to be set right,) and which can be easily done by taking the trouble to enquire of the ignorant Catholic he meets, whether he is a Christian or not? are taught humility, and to submit even to the most unjust aspersions on them, may I hope that the Divine origin and purity of their religion: but as these imputations convey an unjust aspersion on them, may I hope that (if he believes in common with Catholics, and is strictly bound to make restitution to whom he has done, or attempted to do an injury to his person or property) consider, that he is bound to do so, I must suppose unconsciously,
