JOHN DALLAS

CTFULLY informs the inhabitants of Limerick that having disposed of his house in Dublin, he is able to devote his entire personal attention to his business here, and pledges himself to carry on a style hitherto unknown in this City, equal to London or Paris, and worthy of the immense success he has received, and for which he returns his acknowledgments. To those who have employed him he can assure that his classical, scientific, and imposing method of Cutting and Dressing Hair has been satisfactory. To those who have not, he solicits a trial with the just confidence of one whose experience has been the result of an immense practice: with those feelings he begs pardon for a continuance of their kind support.

An extraordinary natural appearance of his Patent Hair-dressing, must be seen to be credited. Frequently two or three members of the same family wear them unknown to each other. This day imported from London, via Dublin, a quantity of British and French Perfumery, consisting of Patent Brown Windsor and other Fancy Boxes, Eau de Cologne, 20 Boxes, French Dozen Atkinson's Hair's Grease, 20 Boxes, Oil of Turpentine, 20 Boxes, and a quantity of Nail, and Comb Brushes. Morisini's Celebrated for dyeing the Hair in one night, &c. &c. the very first abilities always in attendance at home and abroad.

To observe, my Establishment is 125, in the Drawing-rooms of Mr. Riboldi.

Limerick Chronicle

SATURDAY, APRIL 24.

The troops of that fine Cavalry Regiment, the 15th Lancers, in this garrison, under command of Major-General Bagenal, marched out on Thursday morning for the purpose of being reviewed by the band and bugles of the 60th Rifles, a crowd of spectators.

A detachment of the King's Dragoon Guards marched in to the Fort on Thursday, under command of Lieut. Colonel Bagenal.

A detachment of the King's Dragoon Guards from Athlone, under command of Major-General Bagenal, has replaced the Scots Greys at the Barrage.

The inhabitants of Longford have addressed Colonel Bagenal and the Officers of the King's Dragoon Guards, in a letter of condolence on the removal from that district.

The Rifles expect to leave this for Birr, to be replaced by the 5th Regiment from Galway.

A detachment of the 6th Dragoon Guards arrived in Limerick from Bristol, to replace the Scots Greys. The 2d and 3d Companies of the 22d Regiment, commanded by Major Cranter, left Tralee for Buttevant, on Thursday morning, and were replaced same day by the 1st and 4th Companies, under command of Major-General Bagenal.

On the evening of St. George's Day, the Royal Artillery of the King's Dragoon Guards, the 56th and 60th Rifles, marched to Newcastle, where a feu-de-joie in honour of his Majesty.

A detachment of the 91st Regiment, commanded by Major-General Bagenal, marched from Derry on Tuesday, for Paisley, via Donaghadee, and exceeds 200 miles, in a most extraordinary arrangement, as the men, women, children and baggage, could not be conveyed by steam to within three miles of Derry, for a sum considerably under 1000. The time of the journey was of twenty hours.

A detachment of Newcastle, in this County, heretofore a market town, is to be dispensed with as such, and the parishes of Rathkeale and Bruff are to be consolidated in consequence of being Sessions towns.

A detachment of Glengall is going out Governor of the County of Wick. The Lord Gort is arrived in Dublin from London.

steal corn, to be imprisoned six months. During the Sessions week above 1200 Civil Bill processes were disposed of. The freehold registries amounted to one hundred and forty-nine, and principally in the interest of the Lord Chief Baron and the O'Grady family, Mr. Waller of Castletown, Earl Clare, Mr. Gerald Blennerhassett. Many were rejected by the Barrister for want of value in freehold, and more for defect of title. Some have given notice of appeal to the Assizes.

The County Quarter Sessions for the division of Limerick commenced on Thursday morning before Mr. Barrister Cruise, when the following Grand Jury was sworn:—John Clarke, Foreman, John Torrance, James O'Connor, James C. O'Connell, John Beary, John Synan, Jeffrey Keating, Patrick Molony, Thos Cleary, Thomas Fitzgerald, Thomas O'Regan, Denis M'Eniry, John Molony, Laurence Roche, Michael Roche, James Riordan, Simon Riordan, John Butler, and Michael Rice.—The Court immediately proceeded with Crown business, but the only conviction was John Murphy for an assault, to be imprisoned 12 months.

The following convictions took place yesterday before the Barrister:—William Ryan, for riot and violent assault, to be transported for 7 years. Richard Ryan and Timothy Ryan for assault, 12 months imprisonment and hard labor. Lant Ryan, Michael Ryan, Roger Ryan, John Ryan, and William Ryan, for riot and assault, 9 months imprisonment and hard labor. Connor Ryan, for assaulting a female, 15 months imprisonment and hard labor. John Meara, sen. for assault, 3 months imprisonment and hard labor. John Meara, Michael Meara and Patrick Madigan, for riot and assault, 4 months imprisonment and hard labor. Stephen Creagh and Denis Flanagan for assault, but not sentenced.

This day the Barrister enters on the Freehold Registry, of which there are 577 notices on record.

The body of Patrick Millane from Doonas, was caught up by some fishermen at the Strand side of the river on Thursday. Ten shillings were found in his pocket. He is the person whose sudden and mysterious disappearance from a house in Thomond-gate, was noticed in the Chronicle of the 3d instant. The Mayor held an inquest, when a verdict of "found drowned" was returned.

Wednesday, a starch factory near the Presentation Convent, Waterford, belonging to Mr. White, was entirely destroyed by fire.

Joseph Stephens, lately reprieved from sentence of death, for female violation at Tralee, is to be transported.

An order has been received from the Government for the removal of all the convicts in the Cork County Gaol, except John Minahan, convicted of house burning, to the Hulk Surprise at Cove, preparatory to their transportation to New South Wales. Those found guilty of the Doneraile Conspiracy are of the number, and were escorted to Cove, yesterday.

Charles Daly, the young man who had been sentenced at the Cork Assizes, to be executed on the 1st of May, for violating a child under ten years of age, has had his punishment commuted to transportation for life.

The Agricultural interest of the County Clare are about to assemble and petition Parliament against the increase of duty on Irish spirits.

Captain John Holohan, of the 2d Revenue Police, has arrived in Limerick, on his way from London, to assume the command of the several detachments of Revenue Police now stationed in the Province of Connaught.

Captain Clarke, Scot's Greys, has transmitted 24l. to the Board of the House of Industry in Cork, produce of a Charity Play by the Garrison Officers, who are to perform again on Monday.

The Hon. T. Plunkett, son of Lord Plunkett, it is said will succeed to the Deanery of Armagh, void by the death of Lord Lifford.

Lord Lifford is succeeded in his title and estates by his eldest son, the Hon. James Hewett, Commissioner of Excise.

On Thursday, William Scanlan, Esq. late High Sheriff of this County, Counsellor Odell, the Assessor, and Mr. Wall, the Deputy Clerk of the Peace, left this City for London, to attend the Limerick Election Committee.

As to the excise on tobacco grown in Ireland, of which was said to be most profitable, it is considered there was a vast import duty which must be considerably diminished to encourage the cultivation of that article—that the revenue of the Revenue must be, by some means, supplied from some source where it is severely felt. With respect to the proposed stamps, as it affected the public press, and newspapers were a powerful and influential body, enlightened and well informed, and were in their own hands of defending and promoting their interests. As far as this increase of duty on a respectable class of the community, it is believed that these learned and experienced men would not be at a loss to find means of saving additional expence very largely and impartially.

In reference to our intended ship canal, when first proposed he was of opinion that a canal from an harbour lower down the Bay, and not from town to that harbour, would be preferred. He gave up his opinion in favour of that of the mercantile gentlemen of Limerick, who were subsequently instrumental in obtaining a grant of money for carrying that measure into effect. Undoubtedly the benefits which such a canal would bring to this town and neighbourhood, would be in a country like ours, so rich in population and so well situated for trade. The Right Hon. Gentleman then mentioned that the Marquis Wellesley, in his administration, offered him (the Earl) a grant of twelve thousand pounds towards the improvement of the harbour of Tralee, provided the improvement was approved by the Government engineer, and a certificate of Excellency for his approval. The Earl then concluded his able and eloquent speech by reading an extract from the address published by the Catholic Bishops of Ireland, on the subject of the Public Relief Bill, recommending and praying for peace, and conciliation, among all the King's Majesty's subjects, and breathing the spirit of Christian charity and brotherly affection, and concluding with marked and profound attention.

Shortly after the Right Hon. Gentleman had finished, a stone-mason named Kelly, from Tralee, cried out, "What did you say, the Knight of Kerry, what did you say, the Knight of Kerry, what did you say, the Knight of Kerry?"

The Knight of Kerry immediately replied—I shall always be as ready to answer you as you are to put to me by an individual, whether a nobleman or a peasant. He would be to reply to the first nobleman who would now distinctly say that the distress did not exist in Ireland, and that it would be foolish, and a falsehood, to say that it was ever active in pointing out to his Majesty the real distress under which Ireland was suffering. Indeed, we recollect it having been reported in the prints, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in his place in Parliament, that no Irishman was more urgent or indefatigable in pointing out to the Administration the distresses of Ireland, and in proposing remedies for their alleviation, than the Right Hon. Member for Kerry. (Cheers)

The return was then signed by the speaker and the members present.

The Court of Election was declared closed, and the meeting separated in perfect good humour.

Baron Pennefather and Counsellor Odell have been for some time on a visit to the hospitable mansion of the Earl of Doneraile.

The Richmond Lunatic Asylum, which was converted into a District Asylum for the City of Dublin, the Counties Wicklow and Kildare.

Thursday evening, a sailor lad of the name of John, outwardbound, fell from the bowsprit of the ship, and was drowned in the Pool, and was drowned.
