y last, at the Levee, the Address from the eland, agreed upon at the great Conserva- as presented to his Majesty. It was brought chamber by Lords Roden and Lorton. At rd Roden read every paragraph of the peti- sis and feeling. His Majesty is described to rted himself somewhat more "graciously" ntation of the Address from the Corporation

's motion in the House of Commons last night tional Members for London was negatived by e is liberated from confinement, and Mr. vering. The General is brother of the late blin.

of King's Bench yesterday, Mr. Venables r £1,600 from Lord Kingsborough, balance, Mexican Antiquities which already cost his 00. Verdict, £16 10s.

adcliffe fell dead yesterday while speaking Albemarle in Conduit-street. He was well urf, and many years manager of the Royal ast the Committee of the Hibernian e Club dined together, for the first temporary Club House. Sir Hussey led.

DUBLIN, MARCH 2.

conditional order, for an attachment Morning Post, was obtained in the m motion of Mr. Green, at the suit of on. The application was grounded ation of a document, which had been not used, in the recent suit against ion on the subject of Metal Main.

Lieutenant has offered a reward of apprehension of William Cane, leader in the atrocious massacre of Chief bbons and the Police at Carrickshock, enny. This is the first manifestation reward offered by Government for ors of the shocking massacre near ; £100 for the murderers of a Chief d his party!

has given notice of a motion in the ncil for a Repeal of the Union.

tracy and Clergy of Mayo have pre- dress of congratulation to the Marquis his appointment to the Lieutenancy r County. The address is signed by es.

uldowney, of Thomastown, was mur- Kilkenny, on Thursday night.

assigned for Mr. Finn's severe letter le, in defence of Mr. O'Connell, is oyle took law proceedings against Mr. ver 1000*l.* from him belonging to a ciety of females, whose guardian the rchbishops and Bishops of the Esta- rch in Ireland have signed a protest dissent from, the new system of edu- he Irish poor, propounded by Mr. anley and Government.

al meeting of the Clergy of the Diocese of ednesday at Cavan, it was resolved that the reat rule of Christian morals and belief,—that duty, and happiness of man to read it,—and rawal of the Parliamentary Grant in support of cation, was irreligious, indiscreet, and mis petition to both Houses of Parliament was is to present the petition from Cork for a re- local Magistracy of that City.

of Fox v. Gody had at last Assizes of Clon- side by the Master of the Rolls last week, and consequently be tried again at the next Assizes.

of Coals has risen in Dublin since the duty

a public meeting on Thursday in the town of tition for the total abolition of tythes.

was agitating against tythes in Nenagh, on t.

ngfield has declined the Deputy Lieutenancy just been subscribed to the Kildare-street, ndon.

trates of Killarney have taken the informations M'Carthy, against six persons for perjury y, and the informations of Mr. Jeffry Lynch, Maurice D. Brenan, for firing at persons un-and nine £10 freeholders have given notice of

☞ It is particularly requested that Accounts due at this Establishment, may be discharged during the Assizes.

THE LIMERICK CHRONICLE

SATURDAY, MARCH 8.

LIMERICK ASSIZES.

Four o'Clock—Judges Moore and Jebb have just arrived, accompanied by the County and City High Sheriffs, the County Clare High Sheriff, a squadron of Lancers, and mounted Police.

At five o'clock, the Judges proceeded to open the Commission—Justice Moore in the City, and Justice Jebb in the County Court, where the following Grand Jury was impanelled and sworn:—Hon. Colonel Standish O'Grady, M.P. of Caherguillamore, Foreman; Hon. William Massy, of Belmont; Hon. John Massy, of Limerick; Sir Aubrey De Vere, Bart. of Curragh; De Courcy O'Grady, of Kilballyowen; John Croker, of Ballinagmurd, Esq.; George Tuthill, of Fahn, Esq.; Heffernan Considine, of Derk, Esq.; Joseph Gubbins, of Kilfrush, Esq.; Thomas Lloyd, of Beechmount, Esq.; John Bolton Massy, of Ballywire, Esq.; Colonel John Vandeleure, of Ballymastradeen; Stephen Dickson, of Kilfenny Castle, Esq.; Richard Ellis, of Abbeyfeale, Esq.; Eyre Evans, of Ash-hill, Esq.; John Kelly, of Limerick, Esq.; George Meares Maunsell, of Ballywilliam, Esq.; Peter Lowe, of Laurencetown, Esq.; Thomas Henry Royse, of Nantenant, Esq.; Thomas Maunsell Wilson, Esq. of Cahirconlish; Gerald Blennerhassett, of Riddlestown, Esq.; James Denis Lyons, of Tuorine, Esq.; Alfred Furlong, of Newcastle, Esq.

His Lordship charged the Panel, and said, it was very gratifying to him, to address the Gentlemen of the Grand Jury of the County of Limerick, such as now he had the honor of meeting, composed of gentlemen of the first rank, property and intelligence in the County. He repeated it was extremely gratifying to observe the contrast now apparent, after seeing them assembled in Court on the last occasion he presided, at the time when the tranquillity of their County was threatened, and when they had stept forward with alacrity and firmness to discharge their duty.

It was gratifying to witness the happy effect of their exertions on that occasion, for the County Limerick was since in a state that affords a most favourable comparison with other parts of Ireland and especially a county in their own immediate neighbourhood, from which he had but just returned, where a melancholy spectacle was exhibited of a number of individuals doomed to death, some of whom have already suffered the fatal punishment due to their crimes, while others are in expectation of that doom. It must be gratifying in the highest degree, that as country gentlemen, Grand Jurors, and Petit Jurors, the residents of this county may reflect on the success of their efforts to preserve the tranquillity of their district.

The number for trial on the County Calendar is not considerable, but to judge from appearance some of the crimes are of a heinous cast, amounting to murder. Nevertheless it is likely those cases would turn out to be homicides, which are unfortunately too frequent at fairs and other assemblies of the people, which the result of sudden passion often produces, and not the effect of deliberate malice, which cause those dreadful assassinations which rendered life and property so precarious in the adjacent County. The Calendar is of such a nature as not to require any particular direction or notice from the Bench, and he had the most perfect reliance on the Gentry of this County, that they would persevere in inculcating on the lower classes of the population loyalty to their King, reverence for the laws, and respect for the instititutions of their common country, which will alone ensure them the reward of their industry and the safety of life and property. By acting in conformity with this advice, the people must be sensible that the gentry of their neighbourhood are their best guardians and stedfast friends.

His Lordhip then said he hoped to see the Grand Jury at an early hour on Monday morning for the consideration of Bills. The Court was then adjourned.

CITY LIMERICK GRAND JURY.

John Vereker, Esq. foreman; George Gough, Esq. Andrew Watson, Esq. Joseph Gabbett, Esq. Denis Fitzgerald Mahony, Esq. Henry Watson, Esq. Thomas Jervis, Esq. Henry Rose, Esq. Vere Hunt, Esq. John Crips, Esq. Mathew O'Brien, Esq. Samuel Dickson, Esq. John Hartigan M'Knight, Esq. George Sexton, Esq. Thomas Gibbon Fitz-Gibbon, Esq. Andrew James Watson, Esq. William Piercy, Esq. Michael Gavin, Esq. Henry Mahon, Esq. James Black, Esq. Francis Philip Russell, Esq. George Westropp Jameson, Esq. and James Kelly, Esq.

Judge Moore addressed the Jury—He was happy to perceive those Gentlemen and friends whom he had so often before met there, and whom he knew to have performed their duties as Jurors, with credit to themselves and of vast advantage to the public. The result was that this City now presents an example of peace and quietude not to be met with in any other town in this Kingdom. It reflected the highest credict on the civil authorities as well as the vast population over whom they were placed. His Lordship said he had no particular object to speak upon, and thanked them for the full attendance which the jury-box exhibited, and he had only to regret that he should have delayed them so long, but the bad state of roads between this City and Ennis, had kept him on the journey much longer than he expected.

ENNIS ASSIZES—WEDNESDAY.

(Continued from Fourth Page.)

Elizabeth Farrell and Bridget Flannigan for larceny of linen—the former to be transported for seven years, the latter to be imprisoned one year. Bridget Keane, for uttering a base half-crown, to be imprisoned six months. John Guthrie, for compelling Maurice Finn to swear he would quit his house, to be transported for seven years. Maurice and Michael Finn for a violent assault on James Finn, whose habitation they attacked, same sentence. Dennis Kelliher, John Davis, Michael Kelliher, Andrew Hickey, and Daniel Donnelan, for administering an unlawful oath to Mary Fitzgerald at Meelick, and assaulting her, and also for attacking the house of Joseph Arthur, Esq. on the same occasion, to be transported for seven years each. Those fellows were armed and partly dressed in female apparel.—Judges Moore and Jebb were both engaged in Crown trials the entire of Wednesday.

The Records tried at Ennis Assizes were these—Lessee Thomas Studdert v. Michael Arthur, ejectments on the title to recover the house and lands of Sunville and Derra—Verdict for Plaintiff. Richard Scott v. John O'Donnell, an action of costs. John M'Namara v. Charles Mahon, an assumpsit, both left to arbitration. Lessee Sir N. Peacocke v. Patrick Corbett, an action of ejectment. Verdict for Plaintiff.

On Thursday, Patrick Barry, a farmer, from Cratloe, and a man above the common class of peasantry, was put on his trial for the murder of Michael Molony, herdsman of Mr. Donoghue, near Cratloe Cross, on the 28th of April last, in the noon day, when the prisoner, with two more fellows, all armed, and in the dress of Lady Clare, entered the cottage of the deceased who was sitting to breakfast with his wife and children, when they ordered him on his knees, fired and wounded him severely. Still the poor man made an effort for his life, and sprung outside the door, they pursued, overtook him, fired again, and basely murdered their unoffending victim with blows of their guns, and heavy stones, after which the savages danced in triumph round his lifeless body, which was perforated with slugs, while the brains protruded from his head. The prisoner was the first who entered the house, and dragged Molony on his knees, immediately after which he discharged a pistol at him in that posture. He was found guilty and sentenced to be executed on Saturday (this day) at Cratloe Cross, the scene of the murder. The witnesses for the prosecution were Michael Hennessy, an approver, the unfortunate widow, Mary Molony, whose feelings were terribly agitated on recognising the prisoner, and Mary Lyons, a servant girl.

The other conviction was that of Michael Donnelan, for attacking the habitation of Thomas Halvey and demanding fire-arms, to be transported for life. Patrick M'Inerney, and Patrick Carmody for burglary and violation of Bridget Magrath, were acquitted.

After a protracted trial at Ennis, yesterday, of four men, charged with the murder of Patrick Donnellan, the faithful servant of Mr. Synge, of Dysart, late in the evening the Jury found a verdict of Guilty against the entire, and they were sentenced for execution on Monday next. This makes a total of nine capital convictions.

The names of the fellows found guilty of this atrocious murder are, John Casey, who is one of the family hanged on Monday, for Mr. Blood's murder, Patrick Hartigan, Peter Donnelly, and Morty Quinlivan. The circumstances, as detailed in evidence, were briefly those:—

Edward Synge, Esq. was returning to his seat at Dysart, near Corofin, with his servant, when a gang of ruffians, from a hedge near the road, fired and wounded both. Mr. Synge rode forward, although he had received four large slugs in his body, one of which would have perforated the heart and inflicted a mortal wound, had not a bible in his left breast coat-pocket arrested the ball. This is a positive fact, no less extraordinary than true. The poor servant fell from his horse, and died in three days after, of mortification, induced by a ball which perforated the intestines. This murder was committed in a month after Mr. Blood's murder, and in the same nighbourhood. It was nine o'clock, last night, when the Jury returned their verdict of GUILTY against the four prisoners.

Two of the above, Donnelly and Hartigan, were brought back from the hulk at Cove in company with Brody, executed for Mr. Blood's murder, as stated in the Chronicle of last month.

Thursday, John Brody, John Burke, Michael Casey and George Casey, found guilty for the murder of William Blood, Esq. of Applevale, were brought, under escort of a strong party of Police and Military, to Corofin, where they underwent the final sentence of the Law, They were quite penitent, resigned to their fate, and acknowledged the justice of their sentence. Their bodies are to be taken to Dublin for dissection, where the Hospitals are in great want of subjects.

This morning at nine o'clock a troop of the 17th Lancers left town to attend the execution of Patrick Barry at Cratloe, followed by a strong division of the 92d Highlanders. The convict was removed from Ennis gaol at seven o'clock this morning, under a strong guard of Horse and Foot, to the place of execution. Barry was attended from Ennis to Cratloe, (the place of his nativity, and the scene of his guilt) by the Rev. Mr. Fitzgerald, P. P. of Cratloe, whose admonitions prepared him for that ignominious death which he so justly merited.