Eliza Ahern a young woman was found dead on Saturday last, in a ditch near Bruff. She had left her father's house the night before in company with her husband, who is now in custody of the Police, as the body of his wife presented several marks of violence. There was an Inquest on Sunday—Verdict, Wilful Murder against the husband— It is remarkable that Thomas Ahern, the prisoner, now in jail, was taken up last January for violation of the above female, whose maiden name was Collins, but the friends of both parties interfered and he reluctantly married her a few days after, since which period they have seldom lived together.

Three fellows, in female attire, visited a farm in the barony of Bunratty, county Clare, on Monday afternoon, and left a notice to the Landlord not to presume to part with his Steward as intended, otherwise Lady Clare would visit him with her vengeance. This is not had, on the eve of adjourned Assizes.

A group of armed peasantry attempted to break the pound of Tallaght on Thursday night, and rescue cattle distrained for tythes. The Police resisted and both parties fired, when one of the Police was wounded in the wrist, and one of the peasantry shot through the body. They retreated immediately bearing off their dead comrade.
