We call the attention of our readers to Mr. Taylor's advertisement as we wish to encourage the production of our own country; it is either a defect in judgment or a want of true patriotic taste that leads many to suppose that the produce of our own manufactures are invariably inferior to those of England and other places. We are informed that Mr. T. has advanced the Silk Trade by his superior knowledge and unwearied attention to a degree of respectability in many of its branches, nothing inferior to that of England. Too much praise cannot be given him, that while many by the more easy procedure of importation have realised an independence, he has devoted his time and talents to the fostering of our own manufactures and the support of our poor. We think such a line of conduct ought to be warmly supported and upheld.

send a FELLOW CITIZEN to represent them in our Parliament.

I then stated to you, that when that day should arrive, you would find me, as I am, a resident amongst you, devoted to your service, united with you in common ties of friendship and property, your happiness and prosperity.

As a Representative of this great and independent city, I should feel it my duty upon all vital questions affecting its interests, to be governed by the opinions and wishes of my Constituents.

I have been long of opinion that a fair, extensive, and equitable Reform was essential and necessary in our Church Establishment, as well for the benefit of the Clergy themselves, as for the People. No man can wish a system to continue which has ever been a source of rancour and hostility, totally subversive of peace and happiness, and which must be the case, until Tithes and Church Rates shall be abolished for ever.

I have been always opposed to the Legislative Union between Great Britain and Ireland. The conduct of Government towards this country, leads to any thing but its welfare and prosperity. Laws are disgracefully smuggled through Parliament, ruinous to our best interests, of which we know nothing until we feel their baneful effects. I however, expect much from a Reformed Parliament. Should my expectations in this respect not be realised, or should the interests of the country require it, I shall support such measures as may be brought forward to restore a domestic Legislature.

It is the opinion of many highly gifted individuals, zealously devoted to Ireland, that it would be much more beneficial to our country, should the Imperial Parliament hold their meetings every third year in Dublin. This may be matter of serious discussion, in which, as in every measure which can promote the interest and prosperity of our common country, I shall have no object but the welfare and prosperity of the People.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
With great respect, your very faithful
Friend and Fellow-Citizens,
SAMUEL DICKSON.

exertions whether I am in or out of Parliament to you that I do not put forth these opinions for eering purposes, I respectfully submit the following from my evidence given before the Committee on Irish Tithes:—

"I am, as a Protestant, not merely will anxious that a law should be established w all others should be obliged to contribute a property for the general parochial instructi trymen, whether Catholics, Presbyterians, more especially to the support of their spiri desire to see all Clergymen amply provided on property to the relief of industry; for they are now paid from the fruits of the people, which in Ireland arise chiefly from the land. I should, from what I have re prefer their parochial system of education to Church cess (upon the principle for that all these charges are directly or ind from the land.) I should desire that all pla worship should be supported by such a yield to no Protestant in regard for the E which I belong; but on that account, I members of that Establishment should ex the discharge of their sacred duty as Cl unto others as they would wish to be done as Protestants, refused sustenance and Catholic Clergy and People, forming a jority of our countrymen, how can we ex anything short of hostility to us? Th dancy are, thank God? passed away; yet firm councils do not prevail in the fu of Ireland, I expect to see that country dri and deluged in blood. The season for pr gone by, and I do hope that after hav thirty years upon investigations into the through Commissioners and Select Comm rial Parliament will at last turn its attenti tical measures for her relief, by adopting nerously and speedily, every measure w tated by justice and sound policy."

As to the necessity which I conceive ex diate introduction of the Poor Laws, I state Committee—

"I consider that the want of a Poor Ra cause of the disorganization which ex the only bond by which you can connect poor, and to it I attribute in a main degre perity and peace of this country (Engl with Ireland."

"You have a population justly discont for any purpose."

"Do you mean to say that until the poo some interest in maintaining the laws, p ment, or industry, can never be reasonabl country? I do; I am astonished at the of the Landlords, in that respect, &c."

"I think that the want of a Poor Law i needed with all our disturbances; we l growing upon us beyond all precedent i doubling within thirty or forty years sufficient employment being provided by low-countrymen, for the state or them. Poor-Rate will force employment, and beneficial to all parties."

In conclusion, I beg to state that I am o to all monopolies; and, with regard to our city, I can only say, that I shall devote ting attention to their promotion, and shal and prepared to render a full and unreserv stewardship whenever it shall be demand time it shall be my misfortune to differ fro the Constituency, I cheerfully pledge mys by my resignation, an immediate opport some other person better qualified to repres
