

business of the day, Mr. J. K. O'Dwyer was the Marshal, but he had no truncheon; the others were with green sashes, and the flag under which they fought, had the inscription "No Tithes—No Taxes." In Rock's laws were a farce to these Gentlemen's legislators—Rock's laws were loyalty to these; they were down the revenues of the State by whole-Discretion being the better part of valour, the ill's post is always in the rere; Agitators take care of lives when their dupes are put to the route. The Army and Police make their appearance, and away goes multitude in all directions—then there's a subterfuge: was a meeting to petition, and resolutions were adopted of fogging evasion, said the Solicitor-General—(reads resolution)—Mawkish, disgusting hypocrisy—passive resistance, discreet valour—application to fraud, to carry objects could not venture their persons to accomplish—feigned ors. Patriotism is cheap, while they keep their hands in pockets. Those Marshal mis-leaders of the people would er to collect subscriptions for the alleviation of the dis- of their poor neighbours, than by bringing them into with the laws of the land, and then deserting them our of need. As an humble officer of the Crown he upon the Jury to do their duty; if one of the accused ly, so are all; they were all embarked in the same d he implored them, if they valued the institutions country, to put aside all other considerations. Himself, y and the Judge had a solemn duty to perform, and of them abandoned that duty, they would be co-con- s against the law.

first witness was John Thompson of the Police who ices posted throughout the country calling the meet- the Sunday previous.

Forsyth, C. C. was at the meeting, which consisted ards of 5000 people—there was a platform and the ers were on it, dressed in badges, with a flag bearing rption "No Tithes, No Taxes"—the numbers were it to excite alarm. The riot act was read three times, tary then dispersed them.

r Rose, 92d Highlanders, sworn—Got to Cullen 0 o'clock; there were only about 150 or 200 persons those on the platform when the military arrived; was on a thick white pole held by a large stout man platform; the traversers, whom he identified, were ressed in badges; one of the O'Dwyers told him the was over, and that they had passed resolutions; after witness saw a number of people coming wards Bilbao; the mass extended for a mile alf; there appeared about five thousand on one d two thousand or three thousand on another com- ards Cullen; the roads were black with people; d observe them by the undulation of the country, n one hill, and then lowering into the valley, as they led the village; got orders from the magistrates to them, and charged with a troop of Dragoons; one k off his hat, and said "who's afraid, come on;" the eemed to attend to his advice, and were closing upon tary; a policeman was going to seize the man; wit- him getting over a wall, and knew he could escape; aid to the policeman "let the honest man alone, he nothing;" when this man heard witness say so, he ck, but as witness had an eye upon him occasionally, came sufficiently near, witness said to the policeman, eize that rascal," and he was accordingly taken a —(great laughter.)

Rose was cross-examined, and a great deal of laugh- frequently excited by the questions that were put, mode in which they were answered. Mr. Sheil, in to the seizure of the man by order of Major Rose, "Hannibal was nothing to him in manœuvring." Ashton, clerk to Mr. Wilcocks, C. M. proved that eraser, John Keating O'Dwyer, was the Chairman of ng, and that he heard him address the people from orm and say "We are met here this day to do away se grievous imposts, tithes and taxes"—This witness -examined by Mr. Sheil; his answers nor his atti- ving turned his back to him) did not seem to please nd he was very solicitous to know how the witness readily jump into the situation of Lord Lieutenant to socks, from that of being supercargo in a vessel in . The witness gave a very creditable account of nd the Court stopped the interrogatories.

ilcocks, C.M. accompanied the military to Cullen; yver told witness that he was Chairman of the meet- t they had passed resolutions; witness asked him e he said he would give them as a favour, not as a right; witness said he would take them in any ot them, but did not get them after from him; wit- the Riot Act three times before he could get the disperse; the reason he read it three times was be- people were assembling in all directions after he it; Ashton, his clerk, was brought there to take e proceeding, and is a very proper young man. atson proved the publication of the Resolutions of t title meeting, in the Limerick Chronicle of the , as received from Mr. O'Dwyer, and the payment e then closed, when Mr. Sheil, in his usual elo- e, made a most able speech on the part of the Tra- hich occupied nearly two hours. It was principally inst the bad policy of Government in persevering rials; he introduced many of the topics which he pon in the defence on Mr. Pennefather's trial, and by begging of the Jury to lean to the side of en they came to consider the consequences of their the future character of the young gentlemen before ictor-General replied to Mr. Sheil at great length much force and eloquence; and after an able
