

seat; the horses, finding themselves at full liberty, ran off at a furious rate; all the passengers, except one man who got off the car at the outset, were more or less injured; some had their faces much cut: one lady in particular, was so much hurt that she was scarcely able to stand. A car and fresh horses being sent for, the passengers were brought on without further injury.

As a number of labourers were yesterday excavating the line of navigable ship canal, between Tralee and Blenner-ville, they discovered two human skulls, lying close together at about six or seven feet beneath the surface. It is evident they must have lain in the earth for many years, as they were in a mouldering state. The teeth were, however, remarkably sound.

Notwithstanding the notice we gave our friends, we regret to hear that the names of several have been forwarded to the Solicitor of Stamps, for breaches of the game laws. We now annex the 26th section of the 55th Geo. III. which enacts, "that if any person who shall have, keep, or use, any Greyhound, Pointer, Setting Dog, Spaniel, Lurcher, or other Dog, or any Gun, Net, or other engine for the destruction of Game, makes himself liable to the Penalty of Twenty Pounds." We mention this lest any may be ignorant of the law, and wishing to give them every information on the subject.

(COMMUNICATED.)—A work of intense interest on Ireland has this day appeared from the pen of Sir Jonah Barrington, a cotemporary and distinguished participator in the important events which it records. This work would excite a deep interest even as a history, but now it acquires great importance by the distressed state of the Irish people, and the embarrassing condition of the whole British Empire.—The rise of Ireland from the vassalage of centuries to the station and rank of an independent nation, through the energy and firmness of that unparalleled body—the Volunteers of 1782, is detailed in this work with a most descriptive fidelity. The legislative confirmation of that independence for ever by the Renunciation Act of the British King and the British Parliament, and the breach of that solemn compact and plighted faith in the year 1800 by that measure called a Legislative Union, are described in all their bearings; and the ruinous results of that disastrous proceeding, down to the present day, are laid openly and distinctly before the English people. The author, in this volume, assumes a position for his country; he refutes the existence of any constitutional or legal union between the two countries, founded on the incapacity of the Irish representatives, to surrender the Constitution of which they were only guardians and trustees. This doctrine has given rise to many considerations heretofore not suggested, and renders the work now offered not only historical, but unique.—Vide Advertisement.

SIR—I send the produce of one half seed potatoe planted in drill ground last March. The second half has produced six potatoes of the same size, which proves drill husbandry the best, cleanest, and most profitable mode of culture.

Your's truly,

EYRE EVANS.

Ash-hill, August 26.
We have seen Mr. Evans' specimen of potatoe culture, and they really are of an extraordinary large growth, apparently of the description called "Brown's Fancy." The two potatoes weigh, each 1½lb.—[Ed.]

FEMALE EDUCATION

In compliance with the desire of several families, a Lady of great respectability and attainments, purposes to open immediately in London a BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL.

It is proposed to conduct this establishment on superior arrangements as shall obviate the necessity of resorting to Dublin or England, for advantages which would be desirable should be attained near home.

The course of instruction will include the study of the Italian languages—Music, Drawing, and an extensive knowledge of English literature. In this department particular attention will be paid to good reading, expert composition, and popular knowledge of Astronomy. Writing will be on the most approved and fashionable style; and the study of Geography, and the use of the Globes, will receive particular attention called for by their paramount importance.

As the leading object in learning living languages is to speak them fluently, the pupils whose progress is slow will be required to hold all communications both in English and in the language they are studying.

For particulars apply to the Lady, at her residence, No. 10, St. James's-street, London.
