DEATHS.

Wednesday evening, at his house in Patrick-street, in the prime of manhood, after a lingering and painful illness, which he bore with fortitude and resignation, Richard P. Canter, Esq. a Gentleman universally and deservedly regretted. The tenor of his life was characterized by gentleness of demeanour and affability of manners, associated with a firm and unbending principle of integrity. Such attributes won the esteem of his many friends, and secured respect from all who enjoyed the pleasure of his acquaintance. Punctual in the discharge of his duties, both relative and social, and honourable in all his transactions: as a son he was most dutiful, as a husband tender and affectionate, and as a father most kind and indulgent.—The heartfelt affliction of his sorrowing family can only be soothed by the hope that the estimable feelings of his heart, and the mild and unassuming virtues of his nature, have secured for him, through the all-saving merits of his Redeemer, an immortality of happiness in a better and brighter world. His remains were yesterday interred in the family-vault at Castle-Connell.
