

is quite a field of politics, but that gentleman adheres to resolution.

is thrown overboard by the radicals of the party. He will not again support Mr. Lalor. Sir the Hon. Thomas Vesey will probably be the alternatives for that county.

between Messrs. Vigors and Finn, of very high rank, has been amicably adjusted by the Anti-Tory honor is traversing the county Cork; at Bantry, Clonakilty, meetings were held to advocate his views, they were composed of the lowest description

Mr. Bruen, a radical reformer, opposes Colonel Butler, the representation of the Co. Kilkenny. Mr. Loughnan, if returned he will dispense with the Irish

Mr. Bruen and Mr. Newton start for the county Carlow. Mr. Bruen, being of non-age, will not be put in nomination.

arts and the same trickery which characterised the Association of 1828 are again about to be put in force.

the anti-Tory Society of 1834, and a tax for the King and embarrassing the Government is levied off the people—their reverences, the thing the part of collectors.—Mail.

FOR THE WINTER.

NEW IMPORTATIONS;

SELECTED FROM THE PATENTEES.

INDIAN RUBBER FABRICS.

Extensive supply of INDIAN RUBBER, KANGAROO CAPES, OVERALLS, GINGHAM CAPS, HOODS, CUSHIONS, &c. &c. all of which will be sold at lowest Cash Prices.

Early application is recommended, as those of the above are now difficult to be procured.

WATERPROOF WOOLLEN and LONDON HAT

ESTABLISHMENT,
10, GEORGE'S-STREET, (Opposite the Club-House.)
GEORGE O'CONNELL, Proprietor.
December 17.

ELECTORS of the CITY of LIMERICK are requested to keep themselves disengaged, as PARLIAMENTARY CANDIDATES will possibly be put forward, whenever a Dissolution of Parliament takes place.

December 13.

LIMERICK CHRONICLE.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 17.

Evening Major-General Sir James Douglas delivered a lecture on military tactics, at the Limerick Institution. He introduced the battle of Austerlitz. The lecture was most respectably attended.

Major-General Sir James Douglas, late on the Staff in this Garrison, has been appointed by the Duke of Gloucester.

Several supporters of the pall and canopy at the Duke of Gloucester's funeral were Sir E. Paget, Hon. Sir A. Barnard, Sir W. Rooks, Sir H. Tierney, Sir G. Murray, Major-General Hepburn, and Major-General Clitherow.

Anticipated last week, General the Duke of Gordon, 10th Royals, has got the Coldstream Guards. His successor is the veteran General, Lord Lyndoch, Colonel of the 1st Regiment, who has now the emoluments arising from the command of two Battalions. Lord Lyndoch is a Young officers left the Army last week: Lieutenant-General the 12th Lancers; Lieutenant Heneage, 13th Light Dragoons; First Lieutenant Cavendish, Royals; and Lieutenant-General the 16th Regiment.

Major-General the 1st Regiment, quartered in the Mediterranean since the late Duke of Cornwall's death, arrived at the Cove of Cork on Sunday, in his Majesty's service, from Malta. They have since marched to the barracks.

Major-General the 1st Regiment is going to be entered into by the General-in-Chief with the Hon. Board of Ordnance, for the regulation of Officers' quarters throughout the Kingdom according to respective rank; and circulars touching the subject will shortly be issued to Commanding Officers and Garrison Masters.

Major-General the 1st Regiment is going to be entered into by the General-in-Chief with the Hon. Board of Ordnance, for the regulation of Officers' quarters throughout the Kingdom according to respective rank; and circulars touching the subject will shortly be issued to Commanding Officers and Garrison Masters.

Major-General the 1st Regiment is going to be entered into by the General-in-Chief with the Hon. Board of Ordnance, for the regulation of Officers' quarters throughout the Kingdom according to respective rank; and circulars touching the subject will shortly be issued to Commanding Officers and Garrison Masters.

Major-General the 1st Regiment is going to be entered into by the General-in-Chief with the Hon. Board of Ordnance, for the regulation of Officers' quarters throughout the Kingdom according to respective rank; and circulars touching the subject will shortly be issued to Commanding Officers and Garrison Masters.

office of Inspector-General of Police in a view not very favorable for its permanence as a necessary and indispensable adjunct of the Constabulary department. The committee of Magistrates meet next Monday.

Friday evening last, the Steward of Darby O'Grady, Esq., an influential and active Magistrate of this County, was waylaid and barbarously assaulted near that gentleman's gate at Linfield, by some desperate villains, who left their unoffending victim for dead. His head was laid open, and several pieces of bone have been since removed. His recovery is very doubtful.

On Sunday morning last, a horse, the property of a man named Daniel Gavin, was brutally houghed on the lands of Knockroe, near Kiltelly, in this county, and when the outrage was discovered, the poor beast was dead; both hams were cut to the very bone. This is the third outrage committed within a few miles of each other those ten days past. Gavin is a very poor man, and paid for his grazing to another.

On Saturday night, a party of fellows, armed with pistols, were seen patrolling the roads between Carrigatoher and Nenagh; they came up to some carmen who were conveying furniture towards Limerick, and after asking them some questions as to what part of the country they came from, permitted them to proceed without offering any violence, though uttering desperate imprecations against certain individuals.

On Friday evening last, a man named William Brown, a country schoolmaster, was found dead on the mountain of Ruscha, near Newcastle. He was seen on Thursday evening making a short way from that town towards the village of Athea, in company with another man. An inquest was held on Sunday, by John Cox, Esq. Coroner, and no marks of violence being discernable on his body, a verdict was returned "died by the visitation of God." He was a man of peaceable habits, about 50 years of age and unmarried.

The Lords Justices have offered £50 reward for the man who armed with a gun, entered the field of Mr. Willington, near Thurles, ordered the labouring men to quit work, and deliberately shot a mare under the plough.

The high sheriff, Magistrates, clergy, and other protestants of Fermanagh, meet next Monday at Enniskillen, to address his Majesty in support of the royal prerogative. The requisition is signed by four noblemen, three members of parliament, and thirty-eight magistrates.

The Rev. Mr. M'Crea, and 800 of the Evangelical Dissenters of Dublin, signed within nine hours, an address to his Majesty, which is to be presented by the Duke of Wellington.

The Mayor of Galway refused to preside at an anti-tory meeting in that town, and refused the Town-Hall for the assemblage.

The Nobility and Gentry of the County and City of Cork meet on Friday next, to address the King with a tender of their support.

An address in support of the King, has been agreed on by the Mayor and Inhabitants of Youghal.

The Rev. Mr. Boyton declares he has given no promise of support to any candidate for the representation of Trinity College. The learned gentleman is anxious to assimilate the practice on such occasions to that of Oxford and Cambridge, leaving the selection of representatives to the great body of the electors, without any canvas for votes, or contest either. Mr. Boyton is quite adverse to Mr. Litton's pretensions.

Mr. Joseph D. Jackson yesterday intimated to the electors of Trinity College, that he would abstain from a canvas of the constituency, in obedience to the general wish of the University under existing circumstances. Mr. Jackson, however, declares his determination to offer himself a candidate is unaltered.

John O'Connell, Esq. on the part of his son, and Mr. Mullins are canvassing the county Kerry. It is said that Mr. Maurice O'Connell has no chance of Tralee, where he will be ousted by Mr. Denny. It is supposed that the Liberator's eldest son will finally be the M.P. for Kerry. There is no truth in the report that he is starting for the city of Cork.

Mr. Fagan, of Cork, has declined canvassing the town of Kinsale, where the Reformers are displeased with Colonel Stawell, 12th Lancers, their present representative.

George Bryan, of Jenkinstown, Esq. has declared himself a candidate for the County Kilkenny, as a staunch reformer in Church and State, and supporter of the ballot. Mr. O'Connell has denounced him.

Mr. Barton is canvassing the county Roscommon.

Counsellor Leader will be brought forward for the City of Kilkenny. Major Acton, on the Conservative interest, is canvassing the county Wicklow.

Mr. William Pennefather, Alderman Burke, and a son of Baron Pennefather, are named for the representation of the City Cashel.

leeches of the Tory faction, the ancient empire. Peel was then too prudent to see the Irish Coercion Bill pass the Commons, and he said to himself the spirit of England, & the very English themselves. Let the political unions manufacture their and at the next opportunity I will be in with Wellington so in reality—Wellington's pretensions for autocratical sovereignty over England.

I said on my trial in this Court-house the same sentiment, that the constitution (the divine and indefeasable right of tyrants for ministers) was subverted by the utterly as if his most gracious and sacred made a victim like Charles of England, France, had been driven out like a thing abominable under the malison of his people and of the re-affirm in this Court, as a writer on the of ethics, lying deeper than the principles of law of England, that which I before pleaded was unconvicted) as a prisoner at the fore say that William the Fourth has been now, as perfectly an emanation of a Philippe of France, the Citizen King. King as he is, may God preserve this William the Fourth, therefore, does not bring in Wellington and Peel, and Lyndbuck the tory gang. A friend of mine in this found by the newspapers of that morning Wellington had concentrated in himself the government of England. I replied in "and why the devil should he not, for right to it, as the very man against whose England two years ago were in arms?"

Am I writing an agitatory declamatory I am writing the history England and spoken of England and particularly now let me say something about Ireland, Limerick. When his most sacred Majesty to bring in Wellington, I was in Clare, and with intense interest the news from Birmingham was in commotion, I made a friend in my bosom's deepest confidence appropriate to the circumstances of a man who return; I said to him, and he agreed chances were ten to one that there would be a convulsion in the Empire. I took leave of him, crossed the O'Connell mountains, and

I convened a great meeting by public market, and near the platform from your Bust on a pedestal, that I might mark, that it was as your follower I spoke Ireland, I put on an old blue military frock, and personally wore while I was one of the gallantest of the revolutionary war against Ferdinand gave ferocious defiance on the part of the to Wellington if he should try to force a sent up to my friend Richard Barrett to published in the Pilot, that truly Irish P

The men of Limerick yelled defiance in defiance, and half a million of men of Ireland if necessary in co-operation with the good Union.

You have in your speech in Dublin to make highly complimentary allusion exertious in promoting the progress of science; and you have particularly alluded to the Navigation of the finest River Now, I have recently discovered a new waters; and were such a thing possible, the Shannon should be thrown out at the best service the Shannon could do. It is submerged for ever in its Waters a City, its ingratitude, as Limerick!

In that glorious Ode of Lord Byron, "The Isles of Greece! the Isles—Where burning, &c."

there is the following passage, when, all glowing beauty and eyes of the Grecian "My own the burning tear-drop "To think such breasts must at"

The City of Limerick is renowned for the loveliness of its women, and in ancient heroines as the men of Limerick were travellers as he admires the loveliness of present day have to deplore that

"Such breasts must suckle all I decisively, but most respectfully, de Irish politics; but, after your eulogy public letter, would be a gross piece, which my spirit would recoil.

I conclude it by an extract from my President of the meeting a vote of that