CASE OF TETANUS, OR LOCKED-JAW.—Michael Harty, a labourer, aged 20 years, residing in Buoherbuy, was employed in assisting to load a vessel at Harvey's-Quay, nearly a fortnight back, when, as he was going along the deck without shoes, a splinter of wood penetrated his right foot, immediately at the ball of the great toe; he felt very great pain at the moment, but having extracted the splinter, he resumed his work, and took no farther trouble about the wound. He continued well until last Friday, when he was suddenly attacked with difficulty in swallowing, accompanied by violent spasms of the muscles of the throat, neck and back, his teeth becoming fixedly clinched. He was bled but without relief, and on Saturday evening last, being the eleventh day from the receipt of the wound, he was brought to Barrington's Hospital, when in addition to the above symptoms he suffered extreme agony from the slightest motion of his head; the spinal column formed an arch, and every attempt to open his mouth, or to swallow, brought on violent and excruciating spasms. He was immediately submitted to the most careful Medical treatment, the various medicines advised in such case were administered to him with the greatest care; in fact every thing that Medical skill could devise under the circumstances, was put into operation, but so powerful was the disease, that all endeavours to save him failed of success. He lingered in great agony until nine o'clock on Sunday morning, when death put an end to his sufferings.

Ellen Quinlan, aged about 18 years, house servant of Mr. Tuthill, cabinet-maker, George-street, was found drowned yesterday morning in the Canal, having been missing from her service eight days. The body was conveyed to the Exchange, where the Mayor held an inquest, and Doctor Franklin having been examined, said he found no marks of violence on her person, but after a surgical operation he had ascertained the young woman was pregnant, and the body of an infant was apparent in the womb. As no evidence was forthcoming to indicate suicide, and a suspicion to the contrary prevailing, the inquest was adjourned to this day, and in the interim Daniel Boiston, apprentice to Mr. Tuthill, was committed for a further examination.
