The New Presbyterian Church of Galway, has been opened for public worship by the Rev. Dr. Horner, assisted by the Rev. W. B. Kirkpatrick. The foundation of this Church was laid in Sept. 1834, and in little better than a year the building has been completed.

Yesterday the numerous plans and proposals for rebuilding the Houses of Lords and Commons were to be decided upon by the Privy Council.

The annual festival of St. Andrew, the Patron of Scotland, was celebrated on Monday by several natives of the border country, residing in this City, who had a select dinner party, and passed a very happy evening. Surgeon Stevenson in the chair.

On Monday another attack was made on the drivers of the Rev. Thomas Locke, from Newcastle, which is the third for the last fortnight. Six of his men went to distrain in the parish of Monegea, for tithe composition, and were chased by a number of persons nearly 3 miles, one poor man of the name of Mangan, would have been murdered, were it not for the interference of a benevolent person who conveyed him nearly to the town. The Government may as well issue a Proclamation that no tithes shall be paid, if they give not the aid of the Military and Police, to protect the persons who are collecting it.

A dwelling-house belonging to a man named Guiry, who protected Mr. Locke's men, (on the second day of attack,) on the lands of Shanrath, in the parish of Mahoonagh, was on Sunday night maliciously set fire to and consumed to ashes. It was with great difficulty the family escaped, as the door was fastened outside. Another person of the name of Lane, who assisted Guiry in the protection of Mr. Locke's men had a narrow escape, as a stack of straw in the rere of his house was also set fire to, but providentially he awoke
