In Upper Henry-street, aged 80 years, Mr. Patrick Gromwell,a man remarkable for his piety, mildness, and forbearance,—guileless in his manners, placable in his temper, but too confiding in his disposition,—all his cares and anxieties through life were felt, and only telt, for his family; and if ever affection and veneration were given to a parent, it was his happiness to deserve both, and both were intensely paid him by his children. His hopes were not earthly, and his conduct under affliction and calamity was calm and enduring. Animated by the sublime feelings of a Christian, he gave glory to that God who giveth and taketh away whatsoever seemeth good to erring mortals. His life was blameless and his end was happy, for he died in the hope and the assurance of that reward which Heaven has promised all, whose piety is sincere and whose devotion is unceasing.
