

Carlow so safe that the most perjured committee that ever existed (I do not speak of the present habits of the Tories, but of the old Tories, who never paid the least attention to the evidence) will not be able to displace the sitting member. With respect to Drogheda, Randal Plunket is only the representative of a Committee, just as in Cork, Longfield is the representative of Fergus O'Connor and the committee that tried that petition. Kinsale will be rescued from the bonds in which it now is; and Youghal and Sligo towns are perfectly secure. Have you no reason to exert yourselves? Is not the safety of Ireland wrought up in the present administration? Remember the attacks that are making on the Catholic church by the leaders of the faction in the House of Commons. Mr. Sergeant Jackson, amid the cheers of his party, spoke of the necessity of reforming the Catholic bishops of Ireland. But it does not rest there. The Member for Oxford, Mr. Maclean, has actually put a motion on the books to that effect. What has the House of Commons to do with the Catholic church? We are, thank Heaven, not receiving regium donum from them; and when it was suggested that it should be given to our clergy, it was rejected with scorn. When, therefore, they talk of reforming the Catholic church we know very well what that term means, and that they meditate nothing short of violence against it. Is there a Catholic in Ireland, who feels as he ought that will not strain his utmost efforts to keep this blood-thirsty faction out of power? They know that as long as the Catholic clergy are independent of the state they can never hope to retain power; they therefore seek to make them subservient to violence and corruption. They call us infidels and heathens. From this room I proclaim them tyrants, and set them at contemptuous defiance. (Cheers.) My stay on the present occasion will necessarily be but short; it will, however, be long enough to enable us to promulgate these truths. We are working out the experiment of Repeal; and that we are ready to give up altogether the moment that justice is done to us. In the agitation of the question of church-rates in England I see much to rejoice at. It is for the Dissenters of England that the ministers are now struggling with a small majority. It is to relieve them from the tyranny and oppression of the establishment (and in my life I never knew a more priest-ridden people than the English,) that we have ceased to press the consideration of our own claims.

The meeting then adjourned till Tuesday. The ware-room of Mr. M'Donagh, merchant tailor, in Cross-street, was robbed on Saturday night, of a considerable quantity of cloth and wearing apparel, by his apprentice, William O'Brien, and the son of a watchman, by means of skeleton keys. Captain Murray, 15th Hussars, in consequence of the late affair at the Castle, has retired from the Lord Lieutenant's Staff. On Sunday the Rev. Charles Minchin delivered his first sermon at Thomas's Church (Marlboro'-street), to a most overflowing congregation. The Marquis Conyngham, who is carrying on extensive alterations and improvements at his fine domaine, Slane Castle, has given orders to several poplin manufacturers in Dublin, for a great quantity of furniture tabinet for the fitting up of the above splendid mansion. Bochsa, the celebrated Harpist, sailed for England last night. He netted, during his short stay in Dublin, upwards of £700. St. Patrick's night, in a drunken quarrel, Charles Brien killed his brother Richard; the offender is committed from the Head office. Insolvent Debtor, to be heard on Saturday, 15th April next—Thomas Bull, of Limerick, Saddler and Harness maker.

THE LIMERICK CHRONICLE.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 29.

SHANNON SALMON FISHERY.—We have been looking on for several months past at the efforts of the present Proprietor of the Lax Weir to put an end to the illegal practice of fishing for some years, permitted by the Gentlemen (proprietors of estates) on the shores of the Lower Shannon by means of Scotch weirs. We congratulate him on the triumphant appeal he has made to the laws; and we trust, that having now in addition to the opinions of first-rate Counsel, which he gave to the public through the medium of our columns last autumn, obtained the sanction of both the Learned Judges on our last Circuit at Clare, Limerick, and Kerry, and through whom the Grand Juries of those Counties found true bills of indictment against the tenants and renters of the weirs; we say, that the law being now for ever established, we trust and hope it will be discontinued altogether. We give the Gentlemen (proprietors of estates on the shores of the Shannon,) a full measure of credit for having prostrated their weirs, on ascertaining from Counsel that they were illegal; and we had hoped the example would be followed by their undertenants, and farmers. We are sorry, however, to perceive that some are persevering, although, as we stated, bills of indictment have been actually found against them; and we regret this the more, as we are aware that the law will be put in force to its uttermost point, and which may entail ruin upon them and their families. We have little doubt the prostration of these weirs will, after a very short time, enable the Gentlemen and Amateurs, to enjoy the sport of angling as successfully as they were wont to do some 20 years ago, as not only the Shannon itself, but all its tributary streams must necessarily be abundantly supplied with Salmon; and we entreat of all persons interested to lend their aid in preserving the spawning fish, and salmon fry.

By His Majesty's Ship Forte, arrived off Plymouth, on Sunday last, we have accounts from Jamaica, to the 9th of February, by which we learn the alarming difference with the authorities at Carthage, has been settled amicably and quietly. Both Houses of Parliament are up for the Easter Recess. A Bill has been laid before Parliament, to promote and encourage the more extensive manufacture of cotton in the South of Ireland. The second reading of the Poor Law (Ireland) bill is deferred by Lord John Russell to the 17th of April. The Belfast Water Works Company bill is lost in the House of Commons by a majority of 39 to 24. A Bill has been presented to the House of Lords by the Chancellor, for extending to Scotland and Ireland the power of the English Court of Chancery as to granting Commissioners to enable persons to take and receive affidavits.

The two infant female orphans of the late Colonel Breton, who fell a victim to his feelings after the riots at Bristol, are to sail the latter end of this month for the Cape of Good Hope. These interesting children will carry with them the sword which was presented to their lamented father by the officers of the 49th Regt. Two thousand five hundred pounds are collected to erect a monument in Aberdeen to the late General the Duke of Gordon. The Royal Military College, Sandhurst, defrays its own expenses the present year. The estimate is £17,923. There are 180 Cadets on the establishment. The Officers of the Royal Artillery and Engineers gave a magnificent ball and supper at Quebec last month. It is the intention of Government to send out immediately a further force to Spain, consisting of Marines and Artillery. It is with deep regret and indignation we have heard a rumour "that it is not the intention of Lord Howick to bring forward for the consideration of Parliament any measure having for its object the better rewarding of old and meritorious Subalterns;" and that rumour is partly confirmed by the absence of the necessary provision for such a measure (were it contemplated) in the Army Estimates.—U. S. Gazette. Mr. M. Malassez, employed on the Staff of the Commissariat in Ireland since 1826, has been transferred to Halifax, Nova Scotia, by order of the Lords of the Treasury. DEATHS.

Easter Monday, in Patrick-street, to the deep affliction of her family, after a few days illness, Sarah, widow of the late Matthew Ryan, Esq. of this city, woollen draper. In the endearing relations of wife, parent, and friend, her amiable character conferred a degree of interest upon the domestic and social circle, which purity of mind and artless manners considerably heightened. Her piety was fervent, her charity free as it was bounteous, and her faith in the Saviour uniformly steadfast. The virtues, which distinguish a well spent life, will enshrine a fond mother in the lasting recollection of her children.
