TEMPERANCE SOIREE.

As advertised, the first Soirce of the LIMBRICK TEMPE-RANCE SOCIETY, was held in Swinburn's Room on Wednesday evening last. Much interest having been excited, numbers commenced to press in a little after seven o'clock, and at about eight, 250 persons sat down to tea, bread and cakes. We observed present, very many of the highest respectability in our city. The union of the wealthy and influential with the humble and well clad mechanics, must, we think, have been a source of enjoyment to every benevolent mind; united, as they were, to listen to details of so much importance to the interests of our common country. The meeting presented a spectacle of uncommon brilliancy, the large room being adorned in a most tasteful manner. At its upper extremity a platform was erected, upon which the chair vated, surmounted with a canopy decorated with stars, and in its centre a golden harp encircled by gilt shamrocks. Ap-in its centre a golden harp encircled by gilt shamrocks. Appropriate mottoes were painted upon pannels fixed on the walls. From the many verses we select the following:

"Friends of fair virtue, stem the tide of woe,

"Friends of fair virtue, stem the tide of woe,

"Friends of fair virtue, stem the tide of woe,

"Friends of fair virtue, stem the tide of woe,

"And disappoint the drunkard's yawning grave."

The tea having been removed, the following Temperance

Anthem, composed for the occasion, was sung—Mr. Fleury

Rogers presiding at the piano-forte, and Mr. James Boyd Rogers presiding at the piano-forte, and Mr. James Boyd leading the singing:

Columbia conquer'd without blood

Columbia conquer'd without blood

The fiery foe 'gainst whom we fight,

And cries across the western flood!

The voice bespeaks a nation's might:

"Sons of Erin, foul drunk'ness stains your name,

"Awake, redeem your ancient fame."

"Awake, redeem your ancient lane,
"Let drunk'ness cease to curse your Isle,
"And thick contagion breathe around;
"But hail, blest temp'rance' holy smile,
"And bid her richest streams abound:
"Sons of Erin, foul drunk'ness stains your name,
"Awake, redeem your ancient fame."

"Awake, redeem your ancient fame."
"Then shall ye rise in wealth and power,
"While distant lands aloud proclaim,
"The streams of bliss that on you shower,
"And spread abroad your nation's fame:
"Sons of Erin, foul drunk'ness stains your name,
"Awake, redeem your ancient fame."

Hibernia hears the deep'ning cry,
No more she droops her head and taints,
But swells the chorus to the sky—
Exulting o'er the land of Saints:
"Sons of Erin, foul drunk'ness stains your name,
"Awake, redeem your ancient fame!"

The Anthem being concluded, it was proposed by Thomas Monsell, Esq. and seconded by Thomas O' Flaherty, Esq. that Stephen Dickson, Esq. Barrister-at-Law, should take the chair. The chairman having expressed the pleasure which he felt in presiding at a meeting of the friends of temperance, called upon Mr. Talbot (of Ennis) to address the meeting. He was followed by Mr. A.
