sequent year, a valuation of all according to certain defined principles.
 One-fifth of the surplus of the to be then appropriated as follows to the assured who shall have paid premiums, to be allowed in abatement as for the next year, and the re Corporation; the other four-fifths fall into, and form part of, the full valuation.

No charge to be made for Rent, or other usual charges of management.
 The Policies being under the Security the Assured will possess the means of claiming Losses, the payment of which is not only by the accumulating Capital of the Corporation.

Assurances effected under this policy have the following advantages:—
 They will become participators in the profits of this department of the Corporation without liability of partnership, or to contribute to the payment of them after 5 years standing a share of the profits; which distributes them with more equality than any other mode, the gambling uncertainty attendant on intervals, the effect of which is, to give persons a much larger share of the profits than others, who may have the misfortune of dying just before the appointment, and the abatement of premium diminished Assurance when the increasing value of the property may render the payment less convenient.

The reduction of Premiums effected in 1831 amounts to £86,000, so that a person paying £20 per annum will have this year to pay but £2 13s 6d, which is sufficient of itself to reconquer the public.

FIRE ASSURANCE
