

their old quarters, Edward Sugden rose and addressed the house in an able speech, which was of such a cutting nature as to draw out Lord John—or as he is familiarly known by the cognomen of the "state badger"—and such a meise as he made of it when he did come out you could not imagine, for a statesman whose speech is read so smoothly in print. He stammered, and faltered, and hesitated, and stammered again, evidently trembling with a subject "too weak to carry him, and too strong to be carried by him." After a series of mishaps he sat down, "so that without making the slightest impression, and leaving the imputation of "foul perjury" and the conduct of the Bishop of Exeter where he had found them. Sir Robert Peel and Sir W. Follett were the next of any weight who followed on the opposition side, and the lashes inflicted by them were so severe, that it was evident a majority they must have in favour of the motion. It would be tedious if I were to enter into the details, or to attempt to describe the bear garden scene that followed the division. In vain did the Speaker call "order order" in the arena of disorder, all was "confusion worse confounded," and continued so until the declaration of Mr. Callaghan of Cork City and other Irish members, that they entertained opinions perfectly in unison with those uttered by Mr. O'Connell, and were ready to partake of the responsibility, which declaration, if possible, increased the uproar. After a storm not exceeded by anything ever reported of the senatorial deliberations of the Chamber of Deputies in France, an adjournment was moved and with difficulty carried, so that we shall have a repetition, and the entire farce enacted over again. I have endeavoured to give you this hasty sketch of the deliberations in the British senate which will be long remembered in the history of England, and more so from the important and inevitable consequences to which it is almost certain to lead. At the same time I must direct your attention to the honorable mention made of the LIMERICK CHRONICLE by Mr. Morgan J. O'Connell, member for Kerry, who quoted some observations contained in one of my letters. I had better, for the gratification of your readers, give the passage as read and commented on by the nephew of the Liberator, and it will then be seen what little grounds there were for the construction he sought to affix upon it, and how hard run he must have been when he sought refuge for the member for Dublin under such quibbling.

"The house had heard many illustrations of the allegation, that Election Committees of the House of Commons were supposed by the public to decide favourably according to their party feelings; but perhaps one of the strongest proofs of the fact was to be found in an article which was to be found in a Tory newspaper, which he held in his hand. It was the LIMERICK CHRONICLE of the 10th of February, and purported to be a letter written by the London Correspondent of that journal, on the first day the Election Ballots took place in that House. It was dated "House of Commons, half-past five," and there occurred the following passage:—"The ballots are over—we have lost Salford and Roxburgh, but have gained Ipswich." (The reading of this passage elicited loud cheering from the Ministerial benches, and loud cries of question from the opposition.) It was not to be wondered that the cry of "question" should prevail, for there was no tangible ground for the hon. member to stand on, as it was plain that when I directed your attention to the Salford and Roxburgh ballots, and the probable success in the Ipswich, I only meant to convey that we had a majority of Conservatives on the latter, without for an instant intending to insinuate that they would violate their conscience. But every allowance is to be made for the awkward position in which this young gentleman had placed himself, in rising to meet a charge of such heinous magnitude as that made against his agitating uncle, that of accusing some of the first men in the realm of bribery and perjury on their solemn oaths. We must excuse him, for the success of the Conservatives is so great that he cannot sustain himself under its contemplation. Already the Ipswich is decided in favor of a Conservative, and Lord Belfast is in a minority, so that they proceeded to-day with Emerson Tennent's qualification, who no doubt will be the sitting member for Belfast, in the room of his Lordship, and a void election in the case of Mr. Gibson, whose qualification has been declared invalid, and who now only occupies the seat until the committee make their report. There are three ballots more to come off this evening, and I hope to have the pleasure of informing you, albeit Mr. M. J. O'Connell's unhappiness to the contrary, that we have succeeded in obtaining a majority, for then we shall have a guarantee of obtaining justice.

"The red-ribbon bestowed by the Whigs on Colonel De Lacy Evans, continues the subject of general conversation in the Military circles, and has furnished food for no ordinary discontent among old experienced and deserving officers, whose eminent services have been slighted through considerations of party intrigue. On the 6th of March an entire Spanish question is to be opened in the House of Commons, and then we shall have some hard hitting.—Sir De Lacy Evans is quite displeased with the observations of Sir Henry Hardinge during his absence, and is trying for an opportunity to apply him freely to the subject. Sir Henry, nothing loath, all who know him can attest, does not in the least seem disposed to blink the question, or shift the responsibility personal or parliamentary. All the military men on both sides of the House, who have served on the Continent, are expected to come out on the question, so that the discussion must prove highly interesting to your readers.

"In the Lords this evening the Bishop of Exeter gave notice of a petition from Cork, praying for measures to render effectual the sworn engagements of Roman Catholics not to subvert the Church establishment, and weaken the Protestant religion. This distinguished Prelate will bring the subject fully before the House on Thursday.

"House of Commons, Four o'clock.

"While the House is filled engaged in balloting for the elections, I hasten to inform you that various rumours are in circulation relative to the resignation of Lord John Russell and divisions in the Ministry. Every moment something fresh is promulgated.

"Half-past Five o'clock.

"Any thing to equal the excitement in and about the House since three o'clock to-day I never witnessed; the members hurrying in from all parts of town and country, and at four o'clock when the door was closed there could not have been less than six hundred representatives within the walls of St. Stephen's. The first ballot that came off was that for Taunton, and on the parties rushing out to the Committee rooms to reduce the list, the cry was seventeen Conservatives to sixteen Whigs or Liberals, so that the reduced list gave the following six Conservatives to five Reformers:—

"TAUNTON—Conservatives—Edw. Litton, Richard

morning in the Crown Court.

Daniel M'Namara was indicted for the manslaughter of Patrick Guerin, at Ennis, on the 5th of August.

Michael Guerin sworn—knows the prisoner at the bar; witness's father is dead; he was living in August last; went to the races of Ballycorree with him in that month; saw his father struck returning home; saw the prisoner strike his father; believes it was with a loaded whip; over the eye he received the blow; his father had only a little stick in his hand; witness drank two glasses of whiskey and some ale at the races; his father gave no cause for being struck; carried his father to Ennis Infirmary, where he died from the blow.

Cross-examined by Mr. Freeman—Does not go by the name of bully Guerin—(Mr. Freeman handed witness the end of a loaded whip) that is the stick witness had; struck the horse on which the prisoner rode with it; 'twas before his father was struck; struck the prisoner's horse because he was near trampling on him; witness was also struck.

Hannah Higgins examined—Was at the races of Ballycorree; saw the fight when Guerin was struck; saw the last witness strike the horse which the prisoner rode; he struck the horse twice, and then she saw prisoner alight and strike the deceased; the blow knocked him down and he bled greatly; saw him give but the one blow, after which he mounted the horse and rode off.

Michael Carmody examined—Was returning from the races in company with Patrick M'Namara, brother of the prisoner; was behind him on horseback; saw some of the Guerins drunk on the road and shouting; saw the horse prisoner was riding struck twice by Michael Guerin; he also struck the prisoner; heard the prisoner say, that as good a man as he (Michael Guerin) would let him pass; heard Guerin reply that he would make brown George of him when he had him in Clare.

Doctor George O'Brien, sworn—Attended the deceased at the Infirmary; he had a fracture in the head; he died in 16 days after going into the hospital from its effects.

Thomas Studdert, Esq. gave the prisoner an excellent character. Verdict—Guilty.

James Moriarty, was indicted for the manslaughter of John M'Namara, at Caberbane, on the 18th of November.

Stephen M'Namara, sworn—John M'Namara was his brother; he is dead; recollects the day he was returning from the market at Ennis; witness's father and mother were at the market same day; they were home along with the deceased to near his house; he was drunk; saw the prisoner coming home, he was also drunk; he was shouting for Kilamona; saw the prisoner follow the deceased; saw them talking for some time; saw the deceased fall, and heard the prisoner cry out; witness exclaimed to the prisoner "Oh, you villain, you have killed him"; he died in some days after; did not see him strike the deceased.

A statement was then read, in which the prisoner admitted that he did strike the deceased with a hatchet, but it was in self-defence.—Guilty.

Mary M'Namara was indicted for stealing a pig, the property of Thomas Dodd, at Woodpark. The loser of the pig stated that he could not swear the pig found in the prisoner's house was his, it being dead and cut up.

Thomas Studdert, Esq. Magistrate, was examined; prisoner made a voluntary confession to him that the pig was not her's, but said another gave it to her. Guilty.

Michael Gleeson, Matthew Gleeson, and John Mac Namara were charged with robbery and assault on Daniel O'Brien.

From the evidence given by four witnesses, it appeared the prisoners and prosecutors were drinking; that they were all going home together tipsy; that a scuffle ensued, during which the money was lost.

Prisoners were acquitted.

Peter M'Cue, was indicted for stealing a pair of woollen mitts, the property of John Ryan, of Ennis, on the 24th of November.

Judge Perrin directed Mr. Pierce Carrick, of Ennis, Magistrate, to be called from the Grand Jury room. His Lordship then informed him that a person had just pleaded guilty of stealing a pair of mitts, and being imprisoned since 24th November, he wished to know why he had not been tried at the Quarter Sessions, which had intervened.

The Governor of the gaol explained that there was no Crown business tried at the last Sessions. Mr. Carrick also said the same, for the Sessions having been held at Six-mile bridge, there was no Crown business done since October last.

His Lordship said that was a sufficient explanation; but he wished it to be publicly known that it was very annoying to the country and the crown that when a sessions intervened, prisoners for such charges as these should not be tried there; he would never try a case at an assizes, where a sessions had been held at which the case had a right to be disposed of; but he would never object to do so, when the offence had been committed subsequent to the sessions.

John Malony, alias Doule was arraigned for stealing four pigs, the property of Mary Cunningham. The prisoner pleaded guilty.

Michael Hogan stealing two cows, the property of John Cullinan, of Drumcliffe.

John Cullinan sworn—Lost a cow and a yearling; got information about them from a man, who told him that they were in the pound of Tulla; the prisoner lived in witness's neighbourhood for a long time; can't say that he stole the cow; but was told it was he that put them in the pound.

Bridget Cullinan sworn—Recollects the day the cows were stolen; found them in the pound at Tulla; believes it was the prisoner stole them.

The pound keeper, Thomas Manogue sworn—The prisoner brought a cow and a yearling to the pound in August last; he said that the reason of his doing so was, lest his landlord would take them for rent; the prisoner offered the cows for sale to some neighbour in Tulla, and to leave them if he got half the price in hand; they were claimed by Bridget Cullinan.

Another witness was produced who swore that the prisoner offered the cows for sale, and said they belonged to a brother of his who had taken them from his brother-in-law as part of a fortune. Verdict guilty.

James Hogan was indicted for stealing two lambs, the property of James Brooke, of Drumcorn.

James Brooks sworn—Was at the fair of Ennis in September last; had two lambs; missed them on his return home; made search, and was told that the prisoner had them; found them at the house of James Bourke, who is a brother-in-law to the prisoner.

James Bourke was examined through the interpreter and proved that it was a young boy put them into his house. Verdict, not guilty.

His Lordship, at three o'clock closed the Petit Jury to be discharged and another sworn from the long panel, he did not wish to distress them too much, and he would try if those jurors absent in the morning had since come into court. A Jury was made up in lavour, but told to the Court that he only took the ass and car for the purpose of conveying his wife to Limerick, as she was in a bad state of health. Verdict, guilty. The Court rose at six o'clock.

CRIMINAL COURT—FRIDAY.

The following notice was this day posted on the Court House gates, and attracted much curiosity: "TO THE MAGISTRATES OF THE COUNTY CLARE: "Gentlemen—I request your attendance in the Grand Jury Room to-morrow, at 3 o'clock, in order to bring before your consideration a matter affecting the due administration of Justice, &c. which has induced me to tender my resignation as a Magistrate of this County. I have the honor to be, Gentlemen, your obedient servant, DAVID JOHN WILSON."

Mr. Wilson is one of the Grand Jury at the present Assizes.

Mr. Jusisce Perrin entered the Court at the usual hour, and immediately proceeded with trials.

Catherine Walton was charged with stealing a heifer, the property of Thomas M'Inerney, of Miltown, on the 9th October last.—Guilty.

Daniel Boland was indicted for, that he on the 22d July, did set still nets, stop nets, &c. on the river Shannon, for the purpose of taking and killing salmon contrary to law. The informations against the prisoner had been returned to the Crown Office, Ennis, as the offence was committed in Clonderalaw bay, county Clare, but the prosecution was not pressed on this occasion by the lessee of the Corporation, the law having been fully laid down and satisfactorily vindicated at the last assizes of Limerick, when for a similar offence against the Fishery Acts, a verdict of conviction was had upon two prisoners before Sergeant Greene, and previous to which, finding it appears, the offence in this instance had been perpetrated, therefore it was not under those circumstances deemed expedient to proceed for a conviction. Daniel Boland was thereupon discharged from custody.

Michael O'Brien for stealing money to the amount of £2, and assault on Patrick M'Namara, was acquitted.

Bartholomew M'Cormack, John Kelly, Patrick Casey, and John Molony, apprehended in September last, at Athlunkard, outside Limerick, for the murder of Michael Ryan, alleged to have been committed 15 years ago, were allowed to stand out on their own recognizance, to appear next assizes, the Crown not being prepared to prosecute it.

Anne Halloran was indicted for the willful murder of her mother-in-law, Mary Halloran, at Glanomena, on the 29th July.

Mr. Bennett stated the nature of the case and said that it was a question of great importance to find out if the prisoner was sane. One of her relatives swore that the woman was disturbed in her mind, and told him that it was Antichrist took her mother-in-law. Wm. Ryan described the murder of deceased—her brains had been dashed out with a weighted stone, and part of her hair with coagulated blood remained on the stone. The prisoner threw her own little children on the body of her mother-in-law, would cry out to every one that she had killed her—and used to say the deceased was a fairy!

The Judge charged the Jury, who returned verdict not guilty, the prisoner being out of her her mind at the time of the homicide.

Wednesday evening Mr. Nichol was in a majority of one over Mr. Howard, the sitting member, on the Youghal election committee.

Sir William Park, (not in the Judges' list,) is appointed by Lord Mulgrave, High Sheriff of Sligo, because Mr. Howly, who was named for the office, had made an attorney's apprentice his Sub, and refused to cancel that appointment.

Lord Arden has subscribed £50 to the fund for relief of distressed Protestants in Dublin.

The Dublin Ballast Board want 130 tons Spermacette oil for the Irish Light Houses this year.

The Irish Waste Land Improvement Company have taken a tract of ground on the Courtmay estate, in this county, from Lord Devon, who is himself a Director of the company.

The Senate of London University will appoint on the 24th a Registrar, salary 600l. a year.

Mrs. M'Cann, of Castlecomer, gave birth to two infant boys and a girl, in the canal fly boat from Athy to Dublin, on Monday.

John Taaffe, Esq. has set to the Irish Waste Land Company 5,000 acres in the County Sligo, at half-a-crown per acre.

PROTESTANT ORPHAN SOCIETY.—We are particularly desirous of calling the attention of our readers to the sermon, which will be preached to-morrow, in behalf of the Protestant Orphan Society, by the Rev. William Adamson, a truly finished pulpit orator. We are happy to assure the many and respectable friends of the Institution, that the success which, by the Divine blessing, attended the labors of the committee during the past year, is such as to afford the best encouragement to the public to continue their patronage to this most valuable Institution. No object of real and great distress was rejected during that period. The Matrons in care of the 150 Orphans were paid every farthing up to the present month, the Orphans supplied with every suitable article of clothing, while the economy of the funds is best attested by the simple fact of there being still a balance (in cash) in the Treasurer's hands. The appearance of the children at the Cathedral to-morrow is confidently appealed to by the Committee in evidence of the assertion—that while the means of the Society have been carefully husbanded, the end which its supporters have had in view has been faithfully and steadily pursued.

ST. JOHN'S PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.—In a former number we called the attention of the public to the state in which this very laudable undertaking was placed, in consequence of the difficulty of collecting the outstanding subscriptions. We announced our apprehensions that the work should be stopped, we have now the painful task of declaring the fact to be so, the doors are actually closed, and the Rev. Vicar has been obliged to dismiss the tradesmen for want of means to pay them. We hope we may not again have to recur to this subject, and that the liberality of a discerning and humane public will enable the work to proceed.

Doctor Gore will deliver a course of Lectures on the interesting and important subject of the Physiology of Man, and one calculated to convey most valuable information, to which every one who esteems the preservation of health as a blessing should attend. There is no subject in nature, from its importance to his happiness, more deserving of Man's attention than the machinery and offices of his own constitution, nor one more likely to sublime and civilize his mind. Dr. Gore's introductory lecture, a free one, will be delivered on Wednesday evening next, at half-past 7, in the Independent Chapel, Bedford-Row.—See Advt.
