

What was this agitation for? In order that a certain set of jobbing attorneys and squires should hoist themselves upon the backs of the populace, into places in the police and the four Courts.

The Chairman proceeded to read a memorial to the Lord Lieutenant, calling on him, as the head of the Executive Government, to protect their lives and properties. It was not a long one, and the reason why, was, in order that the Lord Lieutenant would have no reason for giving a lengthened answer—(laughter.) It represented the opinion of the magistrates as to the state of the county, and left it open to the Government to take any steps they thought proper towards its pacification; and the magistrates would pledge themselves to give all the aid in their power to carry them into effect.

Sir Parker Carroll did not immediately like the first part of the memorial, but in the latter part he heartily concurred. He would wish to throw a veil over the past, and fervently hoped that every person would join in carrying out any measures that may be taken by Government.

Mr. Ponsonby Barker, proposed the adoption of the memorial.

Mr. Cooke, in seconding the motion, said that the Government had sent the magistrates a most insulting reply. He defended the conduct of the landlords.

Sir Henry Carden supported the memorial. The Hon. Mr. O'Callaghan expressed his dissent from the portion of the memorial, which alleged that "neither life or property is secure in this county."

Mr. J. Scully expressed his concurrence with the opinions of Mr. O'Callaghan.

Lord Bloomfield—The only objection is that life and property are not secure. I would ask when it was the county was not in a worse state than it was in November last?

Several gentlemen were here pressing forward to sign the memorial, when the Earl of Glengall said that he was about to move that his noble friend leave the chair, but, before doing so, he would suggest to the magistrates, that a subscription be entered into, for the purpose of bringing to justice the murderers of poor Mr. O'Keefe.

The Earl of Donoughmore said that he would give £100 toward the reward, and lodge it in the hands of any magistrate appointed to receive it.—(cheers.) He would go any length his means would allow to put down assassination and murder.

It was ultimately arranged that the memorial should be signed by such magistrates only as approved of its contents. A vote of thanks was then passed to Lord Donoughmore for his conduct in the chair, and the meeting separated.

On Sunday, three armed men, with their faces blackened, came to the house of Mr. Thomas Cooney, of Ballynatten, Tipperary, whilst the family were at Chapel at Clerahan, and having entered at the kitchen door, two of them proceeded up stairs, where they possessed themselves of a double barrelled gun and a case of detonating pistols, whilst the third fellow kept watch over the servant man in the kitchen.

Tuesday night, several armed men went to the house of Mr. Stephen Hill, of Sheane, within a mile of Nenagh and fired through his bed-room window; the slugs passed through the curtains of the bed in which Mr. and Mrs. Hill were sleeping, and lodged in the wall over their heads. The party then fired four shots outside and posted a notice for Mr. Hill to give up the land which he held at Tyone.

The house of a man named Stinson, or Steenson, at Mayvalley, County Westmeath, was broken into and robbed of 477. The wife of the owner was shot dead. Her appearance was dreadful in the extreme, her face being almost all carried away by the shot, which caused instant death!

Tuesday night an armed party went to the house of Michael Quinlan of Curraghneedy, Nenagh, and set it on fire. Quinlan and his family rushed to the door, but the monsters who planned the work of destruction had it firmly secured on the outside, so as to render escape impossible. Quinlan, who is a powerful man, seized the door, and with a desperate effort tore it off the hinges, and providentially succeeded in rescuing them from the devouring element; but all his furniture and wearing apparel, was reduced to ashes.

Three policemen, Little, Walsh, and Galvin, returning from Borris-in-Ossory Sessions to their station, at Glyn, county Carlow, were attacked by a number of country people, who followed them from a public-house, and commenced a savage attack upon the small party. The policemen having nothing but their side-arms, were unable to defend themselves with success, and in a short time two of the party were overpowered. Galvin, after being left for dead, was thrown over a precipice into wood, while his comrade, Walsh, was mangled in a most shocking manner. His skull was fractured in several places. This unfortunate man lived until the evening following, when death put a period to his sufferings. Galvin is in such a state as to render ultimate recovery hopeless. An inquest was held on Friday, on the body of Patrick Walsh, when a verdict of wilful murder was found by the jury against several persons.

The examination for the Divinity premium in Trinity College Dublin, is postponed to the 21st Nov. Dean Holmes has arrived at his seat, Kilmore, near Nenagh, from Germany, where he had been for the benefit of his health, which is now much improved.

The Irish Government have recently had several pieces of preferment in the Church at their disposal; and it is but justice to say that some of the late Clerical promotions made by the Lord Lieutenant, have reflected credit on his Excellency. Few more zealous and hard working Clergymen could have been selected for promotion than Archdeacon Hoare, Rev. Mr. Birmingham, Rev. Mr. Benn, and Rev. Mr. Tyrrell, whose names are to be found amongst the most recent appointments. Of these Rev. Gentlemen, the Dublin Statesman and Record justly observes, "their character is established in the christian world, we must not breathe a syllable to their disparagement." Amongst other excellent Clergymen promoted by the Government, we may mention Rev. Mr. Collis and Rev. Mr. Adamson, late of Ennis.

The extensive union of Templemichael, vacant by the death of the late Lord Farnham, will be divided into three distinct benefices; that of Templemichael, in which the town of Longford is situated, will be worth about £600, with a Glebe House; the other two, Ballymacormick and Killoe, will be of the value of £300 per annum each. There is a Church in each of the parishes, but a Glebe House only in Templemichael. All these livings are in the gift of the Archbishop of Tuam.

The interest excited in this City and County on the subject of Dr. Martin's Sermons, is we are happy to state, daily increasing, and we therefore anticipate an overflowing attendance at the Churches where they are to be delivered to-morrow. Some of the most distinguished Nobility and Gentry are expected to come in from the country to collect; and so great an anxiety has been expressed to hear the whole subject of Scriptural education discussed by one of the ablest Ministers of the Church, that we expect to see a most intelligent and respectable auditory on both occasions—the sermon in the evening being (as we believe) intimately connected with that in the morning. The Institution itself is such as must call forth very general sympathy for it is not a merely local one, but embraces in its diffusive benevolence all the parochial schools in the Diocese, containing about two thousand children, and therefore must include among its supporters all the members of the Church of England who are friendly to Scriptural Education on Church principles. The plan too of the Society providing for a superior and efficient system of Education—based upon Scripture, and extending to practical science and general sound information—tends so forcibly to the spread of civilization and moral improvement, that we cannot for a moment suppose that there is a Nobleman or Gentleman interested in the welfare of his tenantry, who would not desire to foster an institution which both invigorates every little spring of knowledge in this country, and directs the entire into one grand stream, bearing upon its bosom those religious and social blessings, so peculiarly needed by this country. It is unnecessary to remind our readers that Dr. Martin's speech at the Rotundo was and is considered one of the most powerful specimens of oratory in ancient or modern times, and that he has proved himself the ever vigilant and faithful guardian of civil and religious Liberty.

"He is the free man whom the truth makes free, And all are slaves beside."

Surely every one of the 'Lord's freed-men' should aid the efforts of our Ministers to maintain a sound and Scriptural system of Education, instead of accepting the so called "National system," which only provides "Extracts" from Scripture, so justly commented on in the following manner, at the Liverpool meeting on the 4th ult. by the Rev. Hugh M'Neile. "Selections from Scripture," said that eloquent Minister, "which were divested of all that could injure the Papal system in order that they might receive the 'imprimatur' of Dr. Murray, and all that could injure Protestant Episcopacy, in order that they might please Dr. Whately, of all that could excite the jealousy of Presbyterianism, in order that they might pass muster with Mr. Carlisle, and finally of all that characterizes Christianity in order that they might be esteemed reasonable by Mr. Holmes."
