The Rev. Dr. Elrington has given £100 to the Wexford Infirmary and Fever Hospital.
On the evening of Sunday last, the Glebe house of the Rev. Charles Coghlan, Perpetual Curate of Nantenan, in this county, was surrounded by a number of men, who demanded to see the owner, accompanying their request with a volley of stones at the door and hall windows, from which the Lady of that gentleman had a narrow escape. On Mr. Coghlan's demanding what they wanted, he was answered that this was the first visit of Captain Rock, and he was ordered to dismiss two of his female servants, who were Protestants; and on his declining to comply with this mandate, one of the party replied, "You shall soon hear from Captain Rock again;" and after discharging another volley of stones, which broke in the remaining fragments of the hall window they departed, using the most threatening language. —Dublin Mail.
The Rev. Charles M. Fleury is to preach the annual charity sermon for the Claremont Deaf and Dumb Institution, on Sunday, the 9th instant, at St. Peter's Church, Dublin.
The Rev. Dr. Boyton has wholly seceded from the Orange Association, but he continues a staunch Protestant Conservative. He has quitted political life.
The University of Oxford has proposed a public memorial to commemorate the great and pious labours of those illustrious Prelates of the Scriptural Church of England, Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, who sealed their devotion to the pure faith in Christ, with their blood, having perished at the stake in Oxford. Particulars in our next.

PUSEYISM.
TO THE EDITOR OF THE LIMERICK CHRONICLE.
Sir—The Puseyite exposition of that famous portion of the word of God, 1 Tim. IV. 1, 2, 3, which so clearly describes the characteristics of the apostate Church of "the latter times," appears so childish, that no doubt, when brought forward before the learned body of Fellows and Students of Trinity College, it must have produced "a considerable sensation!" Upon turning to the Douay, as well as the Protestant version of this remarkable prophecy, I find that they both agree in asserting that this departure from the faith should happen in the "last times" (Douay), or "latter times" (Protestant version); which entirely overthrows the explanation given by Romanists and their dear friends and helpers, the Puseyites, who would have us to suppose that the prediction referred to some early heresy.
Now if the account furnished in your Wednesday night's CHRONICLE, gives a correct statement of the preacher's argument, to wit, that "both the celibacy of the church of Rome and the abstinence occasionally from meat, were generally practised in the Eastern church at a very early period  in the 3rd and 4th centuries,"—and that this was sufficient to "upset Bishop Newton's interpretation" in applying this prediction, as all other sound interpreters have done, to the Church of Rome, will not any plain reader of the passage immediately perceive that "a very early period" and "the 3rd and 4th centuries" have nothing to do with the "last" or "latter" times, spoken of in the inspired text? I do indeed regret that Trinity College together with the University of Oxford should look with so much complacency to the city built upon seven hills. I would not be uncharitable; but may we not be led to surmise that, as the road to preferment in the present day runs through the gates of popish influence, and as good livings, Deaneries and Bishopricks are tempting prizes, and "a gift" as the Scripture says, "doth blind the eyes of the wise," so we must account for many strange things we see and hear of in these days, upon the principle laid down by a quaint writer, who, in reference to those ministers, who are more desirous of securing the emoluments of office than of promoting the good of souls, asks—
"What is it makes all doctrines clear,
But just three hundred pounds a-year?"
I remain, yours,
TENEZ LE VRAIE.
Limerick, Nov. 30.
The following is the text referred to:—1 Tim. IV. 1, 2, 3. "Now the spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their consciences seared with a hot iron; forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving, of them which believe and know the truth."
TO THE EDITOR.
Sir—In justice to Limerick, I beg to explain away an erroneous notion of the advocates for Steam communication from this port to London. They assume in print that the commerce and trade of Waterford, with its small population, is superior to that of Limerick, with a much larger one. In reply to this, I refer with confidence to the best proof of our greater prosperity in that respect, the receipts of her Majesty's Excise and Customs, which in Limerick for the last ten years have exceeded those of Waterford. Those who doubt can satisfy themselves on the spot by inquiry.
Dec. 1. FAIR PLAY.
"W. C. G." is our next.

"I have the honor to be, your Lordship's obedient, humble servant,
"D. J. WILSON."
"To Lord Morpeth."
"Dublin Castle, 7th Nov. 1838."
"Sir—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 2nd instant, respecting Daniel Molony, and to inform you, that inquiry has been instituted into the case.
"I have the honor to be, Sir, your obedient, humble servant.
"MORPETH."
"To David J. Wilson, Esq.
"Belvoir, Six-mile-Bridge."
"My Lord,—I have received your Lordship's letter of the 7th, acknowledging the receipt of mine of the 2d inst. respecting Daniel Molony, and stating that inquiry has been instituted into the case. As your Lordship does not state the principle on which the inquiry is conducted, the points to which it is to be directed, or the object with which it is now instituted, and as neither Molony or myself have received any notice to attend it, I feel again compelled to address your Lordship. If the inquiry is intended to elicit the entire of the facts connected with the case, I beg to suggest, that all persons having an interest in the result, should have an opportunity of attending the investigation. Identified as I am with the matters, and willing to meet the result before any tribunal, I must protest against the correctness of any decision that may be come to, upon ex parte statements, or ex parte evidence.
"I have the honour to be, with great respect, your Lordship's obedient servant,
"D. J. WILSON."
"Belvoir, November 8th, 1838."
"Dublin Castle, 10th November, 1838."
"Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your further letter of the 9th inst. relating to the case of Daniel Molony, and to inform you that the object of the enquiry mentioned in the letter addressed to you on the 7th of this month, was to ascertain, whether any intention existed on the part of any officer of the Government, to prosecute Molony for his conduct in 1834, and that it appears, that no such prosecution is at present contemplated.
"I am, Sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
"T. DRUMMOND."
"To David J. Wilson, Esq. Belvoir,
"Six-Mile-Bridge."
"Belvoir, November 13, 1838."
"My Lord—Your Lordship's letter of the 7th instant, stating that inquiry had been instituted into the case of Daniel Molony, led me to hope that that which I so long sought for, and so earnestly pressed, had, at length, been conceded.
"Mr. Drummond's letter of the 10th has, however, disappointed that hope, by stating that the inquiry was merely directed as to whether it was the intention of a Government Officer to institute proceedings against Molony, for his conduct in 1834, adding that such was not the present intention, thereby leaving Molony in the state of suspense of which I complained, and from which I requested he might be relieved. In consequence, my Lord, of the assertion, that it was likely Molony would now "be prosecuted, and if transported, that he might thank me for it," I on the 5th of this month, enquired if any informations had been returned to the Crown Office against him. The reply was, that no informations had been returned; but the Deputy Clerk of the Crown stated, that he had seen some relative to the case, without any recognizances to prosecute attached. On the 10th instant, he called on me to say, the informations to which he referred had since been lodged in the Crown Office, and I proceeded to see them. Supposing the entire matter to which they refer to be strictly true, (though in the hasty perusal I made, I detected two glaring contradictions) still not considering them as at all bearing on the original question at issue between the Government and myself, I shall not stop to make the slightest allusion to their contents, and shall merely refer to them, to give some idea of the system that exists. Of these informations, thrust into the Crown Office, in November, 1838, three (or four, as well as I recollect) appear to have been made in December, 1837—some in September last. One, I am informed, was got up under very peculiar circumstances. None of them appear to have been made at Petty Sessions—none have any recognizance to prosecute attached—one is made by the convict, Brown,—one by his brother—one by his father, and another by his cousin, the convict, Cody—one by Mrs. Lalor, who, four years before, refused to make information. The chief tendency of all is to corroborate a statement by Mr. Brew, and all appear to have been taken by Mr. Brew, without the attendance of any other Magistrate. Your Lordship will recollect, that it was to Mr. Brew the parents of the convict, Brown, specially requested his Excellency would refer for facts; that it was upon Mr. Brew's report on my memorial the commutation took place, and that in my statement, I clearly shewed, that neither the memorial, or certificates adhered to facts, and that Mr. Brew must have been aware of this. And here, my Lord, it may not be amiss to remind your Lordship of the rules prescribed by his Excellency, as regarding Stipendiary Magistrates in cases of reference—I allude to his Excellency's strictures upon Major Rowan, in the case of Mr. Sheil: Molony, my Lord, refused a bribe to abandon a prosecution, and his life was threatened for doing so; he vindicated the law—he prosecuted to conviction—he did so in fear and trembling—he did so at my instigation, and his life was near being the forfeit. In return, he was abandoned by the Government, and the sentence on his all-but-murderers, commuted without due enquiry, and because I presume to put before the public the facts connected with his case, and exposed the unworthy means resorted to, to stifle enquiry, he is threatened with prosecution and transportation for an offence, with which he was charged four years before; more, my Lord, the same officer who now threatens prosecution in November, 1838, stated in his report to Government, that he heard the man admit the entire of the charge in open Court in April, 1837, and during the entire of that period of eighteen months not the slightest attempt was made to bring him to justice. My Lord, you are an English Nobleman, of high station and character, with a numerous constituency will you, my Lord, will your constituents, (I designate what I have detailed with the name of justice,) comment upon such a system to the enlightened portion of the public, (I care not what the political opinion be,) I look on as superfluous to the Government after the practices of two of their officers, which I have developed,—I feel it would be useless. Molony, my Lord, first, suffered by following works, to the O'Connell annuity.—Beamish and C. ford £50; Thomas Lyons & Co., James Murphy & £40 each; D. Murphy & Son, W. Hackett & C. S. Murphy, £20 each; D. Callaghan, M. P. £10.

A fire broke out at a Pawn-office in Ennistimon Sunday, belonging to a Mr. Curtin. It occurred the middle of the day, and a great number of beds were destroyed. He was also a dyer, and it is supposed that one of the vitriol bottles burst caused the fire.
Two men and two women were found drowned the Suir, near Clonmel, this week.
We perceive by our advertising columns that stock of one of the oldest and most respectable houses in the south of Ireland, is for the hammer Monday next, at Mr. Marshall's establishment. So plate, plated wares, and a few gold articles, are leading goods, many of them of the most modern fashion, but more of the old school, that a few years ago might have been considered the least likely any property in Ireland that an Auctioneer would have to exercise his calling on.
Mr. Charles O'Hara, of this city, is appointed agent for the sale of Thunders' celebrated Ale.—See Ad.
The Medical Hall, George-street.—Mr. O'Shaughnessy, of the Royal College of Surgeons, and Licentiate Apothecary, Proprietor, has, this day, commenced business. The interior economy of this elegant and unique establishment, so completely adapted for every branch of the compounding and retail department, displays, at one view, the mature judgment of an experienced and competent medical gentleman, whose preparatory appeal to public patronage has not deceived the anticipations that were formed, whether we regard the high character of the medicines, the orderly arrangement of the Hall, or the professional ability of the proprietor, who pledges himself to an object of the greatest consideration to the public—a constant personal superintendance.—See Advertisement.
