Sir David Roche, M.P., has left London for Carass.

As the Dublin and Limerick Mail Coach was passing the Curragh of Kildare, on Monday night, it came nearly in contact with a common car full of armed men, when five shots were discharged at the Guard in rapid succession, but fortunately without effect.

On Wednesday last, the house of James Riall, Esq. of Moglass, near Fethard, was attacked by an armed party, and fired into. On the same day, a threatening notice was served on Dr. Ryan, of Fethard, and the only cause is, that he lately took some lands.

The superintendance of the Doonass Dispensary is vacant by the lamented death of Dr. George Lloyd, but recently appointed thereto.

Government rewards to discover the perpetrators of murders and outrages in the last year, and which said rewards not being claimed, we infer the criminals are not brought to justice:—£50, burning Mr. Sampson's stables and hay, in Clare; £100, turning up land of James Gloster, Esq. do.; £100, turning up land of J. Frost, do.; £100, burning J. M'Carthy's house, Limerick; £50, murder of D. Griffin, do.; £100, turning up land of Peggy Savage, do.; £100, murder of J. Cosgrave, do.; £105, attacking house of J. Frost, Clare.

The Medical Committee of Cork have called a meeting of the profession this day, to consider the laws relating to medical witnesses upon inquests, and in courts of justice.

The Bishop of Cashel leaves Clarisford House, Killaloe, on Monday, for Waterford.

The Archbishop of Tuam will take the chair on Monday, at the 21st annual meeting of the Irish Society in Dublin.

The Rev. Thomas Knox, of Toomavara, nephew of the Bishop of Limerick, received a threatening notice on Tuesday night, for entertaining at his house Mr. Justice, agent to the Rev. J. Massy Dawson in that quarter. John Donoghue, land steward to Mr. Dawson, also received a notice to prepare for the death of Mr. Hill, a former land steward, murdered in the Glen of Aherlow.

The radical friends of Dr. Sampson are anxious he should succeed Dr. Vignoles as Dean of the Castle Chapel.

The Rev. Mr. Rogers has been appointed to the vicarage of Cahir, and not the Rev. Christophilus Garstin, as heretofore mentioned, vacant by the resignation of the Hon. and Rev. Mr. Cavendish.

St. Peter's Church, Athlone, is to be rebuilt by the Ecclesiastical Board.

The several general meetings of the different clerical and religious societies, will be held in Dublin next month, commencing on the 9th.

The tenth annual meeting of the Protestant Orphan Society of Ireland will be held in Dublin the 5th of April, when 2000 orphans are to attend.

Several of the Belfast Methodists subscribed £200 each to the centenary fund. In Derry £600 is collected.

It will be seen by advertisement that the Wesleyan Methodists of this City are about to hold a Centenary meeting for the Limerick district, in their Chapel, George's-street. The Centenary fund now exceeds £175,000. The Irish meetings, already held, have produced larger sums than was anticipated by the most sanguine supporters of this cause. The Dublin meeting alone produced £5,000, that of Belfast, £2,800, Cork, £1,800, and Bandon, £1,100. The wisdom as well as the piety discoverable in the entire scheme cannot fail to recommend every suggestion to the good sense and right feeling of the Methodists generally, whose liberal subscriptions we feel quite sure, will expose to derision the calculations of the timid. The loyalty and sound constitutional feelings of the Wesleyan Methodists fully entitle them to the confidence and support of every sound hearted and right minded Protestant, and numbers of our countrymen of other religious denominations will, we expect, practically demonstrate their admiration of these estimable, and, at such a crisis, most valuable qualities by contributing to the Centenary fund.

A Wesleyan Centenary Meeting will take place on Wednesday, at Tralee.

We are gratified to learn that Mr. Dawson Dean Heather, of Dublin, has benevolently consented to preach the Annual Sermon for the education and maintenance of the children of Methodist Preachers, in the Bedford-row place of Worship on Sunday evening, the 24th instant. Mr. Heather is also one of the deputation engaged for the celebration of the Centenary of PRIMITIVE Wesleyan Methodism, to which we have alluded in another part of this impression. The celebrity of this orator will surely command very crowded auditories in Limerick.

FUNERAL SERMON—Mr. Connolly preaches to-morrow evening, in Bedford-row, on the death of the late Rev. John Howe. Whether we regard this as a mark of respect to the memory of a much lamented minister, or as an effort to improve the solemnity for the benefit of the living, we deem the announcement likely to attract public attention.

The grand Jury of Drogheda have fiated a presentment for the appointment of the Rev. Mr. Boyd as Presbyterian chaplain to the gaol.

We are quite pleased to hear that Mr. Gallagher has accepted a pressing invitation from several Ladies of distinction, to give a performance on Tuesday evening.

An interesting table of calculations relative to Irish exports and imports, compiled from the Report of the Railway Commissioners, shall appear in our next.

PENMANSHIP.—Mr. M'Loughlin's system of Penmanship, before noticed by us as one of the most facile and complete we had ever investigated, we are happy to find, engages the attention, and receives the patronage of great numbers of those to whom, in a large commercial city, it must always be a matter of much importance to speedily acquire a good method of writing, of which neglect or erroneous tuition in early youth, too frequently deprives numbers. The gratification to be derived from his specimens would alone form a sufficient inducement to visit his rooms.

"The Lords, upon any one one of the leading questions involving the principle of the rival parties now contending for superiority in the State. The sum already expended on the railway commission amounts to the enormous sum of £35,691.

"Slander with all her tongues is quite busy in furnishing additional instances of female weakness in the Court of Queen Victoria. It is now whispered that another inmate of the Palace, already holding a high appointment, who recently entered into the married state with an inferior to her in rank, though respectable in his way as a lawyer, presented her Lord and Master with an heir before the usual period. There is not a word of truth in this, and I merely mention it to repudiate the imputation on a lady of unspotted fame.

"The revised Pension List has just made its appearance, and the entire sum to be annually provided for out of the Civil List amounts to £130,635.

"It is whispered at the Clubs, that Lord Ward, a young man not long come to his title, has lost an almost incredible sum at play, at Crockford's. It is stated at two hundred thousand pounds, and the fortunate winners are said to be Lord Chesterfield, and Mr. Payne, who have, themselves, lost large fortunes in the play ring. The immensity of the sum makes many doubt it; but that his Lordship has been terribly fleeced, there is no doubt at all.

"Counsellor Croke, of the Irish bar, brother of the Parish Priest of (I think they call it) Charleville, has been appointed Solicitor-General of Port Philip, in the district of Sydney, New South Wales. He is preparing to take his departure the earliest opportunity.

"The Great Western steamer arrived yesterday at Bristol in fifteen days from New York, after having cut out the ice for twenty miles, and been buffetting through icebergs for seven hours. She brings most important news respecting the disputed boundary of Maine, which caused much bustle among the American Statesmen who compose the Van Buren Cabinet, and has here raised the greatest sensation on Change. It is now certain that the authorities of Maine have set themselves in defiance of British authority, and that if the remonstrance of Sir John Harvey the Governor of New Brunswick be not attended to, a hostile collision is absolutely unavoidable.

"The debate on the Corn Laws closed at half-past 12 o'clock, when it was adjourned to this evening.

"The King of the French is under the necessity of accepting of the services of M. Thiers, as Foreign Minister, in conjunction with Marshal Soult, as President of the Council. The struggle was to keep Thiers out of the Foreign Portfolio; but his position was too strong, and Louis Philippe had to succumb. This is favourable to the cause of Donna Isabella, for Thiers is pledged to active interference in the affairs of Spain.

"The Chancellor of the Exchequer is to have an interview this afternoon, with Lord Hill, at the Horse Guards, upon the now urgent necessity of reinforcing our Army in Canada, as the news from that quarter is very alarming. The Right Hon. Gentleman's son, your late High Sheriff, was married the day before yesterday to Miss Frere, of Cambridge.

"The monstrous idea of Ministers passing a short bill to enable O'Connell to hold the office of Irish Chancellor, vice Plunkett resigned, is scouted with derision and disgust by the Conservatives.

It is supposed that the new Court-house of Ennis will be erected in Gaol-street, on the site of the Old Gaol, to which will be added the extensive field adjacent.

There was a steeple chase at Taghmon, Wexford, on Monday, for a fifty guinea cup—four mile course—12 stone—when 16 horses started, and Mr. R. Harvey's Silvertail won by a length. Mr. Cooke's Steampacket second, and Mr. Donovan's Jacob Faithful, third.

PENMANSHIP.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LIMERICK CHRONICLE.

Vires acquirit eundo, applies as well to individuals as to fame.

We have this remark demonstrated in the justly celebrated Penman, Mr. M'Loughlin, Author of a new and perspicuous Treatise on the beauties of Writing—a work of great merit.

This gentleman, after devoting much time to the study and practice of writing, has succeeded in reducing this beautiful Art to a science and a system original and complete, founded on mathematical principles, and directing the learner, not by imitation of often rude precedents, but by rational demonstration of the just properties of the characters, whether in ornamental writing, combination in the ordinary and useful hands, or in stenography—a method far surpassing in merit any other ever offered to the public—the mind being made to suggest the design, while the eye and hand are employed in the execution. Mr. M'Loughlin, unlike the ephemeral quacks in this fine accomplishment, who so often impose on public credulity, invites the discerning public to a perusal of the high testimonials of the success of his system, which, in his tour of usefulness, has procured for him the esteem and approbation of the first literary characters of the day.

Vires acquirit eundo, may be thus translated—He gathers fresh laurels in his career. JUSTICIA.

Lord Donoughmore has arrived at Palmerston-house, Dublin, from Knocklofty.

In the building to be annexed to the new Savings Bank we stated in our last that a public office was to be annexed; it should be a public clock.

and delighted. He was subsequently examined in Geography and Arithmetic, in which sciences he proved himself quite an adept. Mr. Robins communicated to him by signs with his fingers, requiring him to show what a tailor was, a barber, a sailor, a soldier, a schoolmaster, s minister, a lawyer, a miliner, and a lady at toilet, when his marked and expressive delineation of th ese various characters, highly amused the spectators.

Mr. Robins, on the boy leaving the table, made an appeal to the meeting in behalf of the invaluable institution, in which deaf and dumb children, devoid of the natural faculties and endowments with which others are blessed, receive useful instruction, and are enabled to communicate their thoughts, their wishes, and their wants, and, above all, to learn the word of God, and practice it beneficially. On Easter Monday next, he said, there would be an application made by 79 deaf and dumb children, to be taken into the Institution at Claremount, and he hoped the Committee would be enabled by those whom God blessed with their reasoning faculties, without physical defects, and on whom he bestowed the comforts of life, to take these children under its protection. It was one of the fundamental rules of that society not to receive any child over 12 years of age, and out of the 79 applying, 29 of them, if not admitted on Easter Monday next, would be for ever disqualified as candidates, and, thereby, left in ignorance and darkness, unacquainted with religion or christianity for the term of their natural lives, and destitute of all means to struggle with a world of care and sorrow. He was sorry that this City, which was one of importance, and possessed of such wealth and intelligence, was deficient in subscribing as much as would be requisite to maintain one pupil (£18), for, along with education, the pupils were also supported. Nenagh, he said, a small town, had subscribed twice as much as this City, and he hoped and trusted that the Citizens of Limerick would come forward. and give their donations to enable the Committee to uphold the Society. There were some ladies that had taken collecting cards, and some masters of academies, and he hoped his juvenile hearers would contribute liberally, after the interesting specimen the deaf and dumb boy had given them that day, and which he never could have done if such an Institution as Claremount was not in existence.

Mr. Norman addressed the meeting, related different circumstances, to prove the utility and usefulness of the Society, and concluded by a feeling appeal on its behalf.

Mr. Robert Connolly pleaded the cause of the Institution, and read two very interesting letters, written by a boy, named Sullivan, a pupil in Claremount, to his mother in this city. The handwriting was excellent, and the composition feeling and interesting.

Rev. Mr. Jacob briefly alluded to the claims the Institution had on the public, from the Scriptural education the pupils received. The Rev. Gentleman, also, read a poem, written by a deaf and dumb girl of 11 years old, on the death of her grandmama, which breathed the spirit of the Sacred Scriptures, imbibed by her youthful mind at Claremount. He concluded by calling on the Citizens to subscribe, and felt happy in stating that the pupils of Mr. Bryce's academy subscribed for this year £17—an example to all the other academies in town.

Rev. Dr. Townley moved a vote of thanks to the Chairman, and, having advocated the claims of the Institution by a few observations, the meeting separated.

Captain Sayers acted as collector, and a large sum was received in the room.

There were pupils (male and female) from different schools in attendance—the most prominent, those of Mr. Bryce, nearly 40 boys. Several collecting cards were taken, and copies of the last year's report.
