THE LIMERICK CHRONICLE.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 21.

With few and short intervals only, the weather has continued, since our last, wet and gloomy, the rain falling with pitiless aspect upon our meadows and cornfields, adding every hour to the ruin and devastation which prevails, and giving the country a most melancholy appearance, which the harvest labourers behold in absolute despair. In one fair hour, which they eagerly avail themselves of to snatch part of their crop from impending ruin, they are driven from work the remainder of the day by rain, which undoes what little they had saved. In many places the wheat fields are only half cut, not gathered in, but the grain lying on the field drenched with water, and in others the corn will never be cut. There was loud thunder yesterday in the county Clare, followed by torrents of rain, which inundated the tillage.

The lowlands in and about the City and Liberties, far as the eye can reach, present almost an unbroken sheet of water, and the inundation has advanced nearly a foot this week.

The late Stephen Dickson, Esq. who died exceedingly affluent, willed the chief part of his great landed property to his brother, Major-General Wm. Dickson, Lieut.-Col. John Dickson, and the Rev. Richard Dickson, beside a considerable estate to his nephew Mr. Biggs. The settled hereditary property reverts to Lieut.-Col. Dickson, next brother of the deceased. An estate of £2000 a-year, left to Mr. Dickson's nephew, Stephen Dickson Bateson, (deceased) goes to the legatees; to his daughter, Miss Dickson, now residing in England, a fortune of £25,000; handsome legacies to each of his nieces, daughters of the Rev. Richard Dickson; and presents to his old domestics. His executors are Major-Gen. Dickson, Rev. Richard Dickson, Counsellor Geraghty, and John Nash, Esq. who is bequeathed £500, to act as such. The residuary legatees are the Rev. Richard Dickson, and Major-Gen. Dickson, C. B.

On Sunday, six fellows entered the house of Hartigan, a farmer, at Rathmore Castle, in this County, during the absence of the family at Chapel, and took a gun and a case of pistols, with which they decamped, notwithstanding they were pursued by some of the country people. They escaped, by crossing the river at Manister, where a police station is much wanted.

William Smith, Esq. Under Sheriff of the County, having to satisfy a writ, seized some cattle in the case of Bourke v. Londrigan, near Tipperary, had them sent on to that town on Thursday for sale, when a crowd assembled to intimidate buyers, and prevent a sale. The stock were, in consequence, withdrawn, and, for fear of rescue, escorted into this city yesterday by a detachment of the Scots Greys, and 42d Highlanders, whom the Sheriff was obliged to call on
