James Ryan a. The Rev. John Nolan, R.C.C .- Mr. Gleeson said as this was a case in which Mr. Nolan was concerned as President of the Temperance Society. he would suggest the propriety of having it settled out of Court, as it was entirely a question of compensation. After some discussion, the case involving the possession of a house, was left to the arbitration of Alderman FitzGerald.

Thomas Gerald was fined 1s. and costs for assault on Edward Trant.

The Excise a. Joseph Marshall -This was a case in which a penalty of £100 was sought to be recovered from Mr. Marshall, for not rendering a schedule of sale within the time prescribed by law.

Mr. John Blair, sworn.-Is Pro-Collector of Excise; a catalogue was received at the Excise Office, of books, &c. intended to be sold by Mr. Marshall; that sale was not settled at the office; can't say whether there was a sale at all or not.

Mr. O'Flaherty, Collector-It does not signify whether such sale was made at all; the account should be rendered.

Richard Avery sworn-Is an Officer of Excise remembers the 17th, 18th, and 19th of June last; saw several lots of books, wines, &c. sold on the 17th and 18th at the Auction Mart; they were knocked down in the usual way to purchasers.

Mr. Roche-The Act requires that a return should be made of a sale, or non-sale.

Mr. Marshall—I admit that the books and wine were sold, and I went to available from the County Tipperary; having been from home, my brother, (who s my known clerk) went to the Excise Office, and paid a large duty; amongst the money, he handed a for this particular sale: the Collector handed it back. saying, as a few articles were bought in for the owner, the return should be made by the auctioneer, and no other person.

Alderman Watson—The 15th section of the act says the auctioneer, or his known clerk, may make the

Mr. O'Flaherty referred to the 22nd section, which he relied on in support of his case.

Mr. Marshall—I'll prove the return was made, and that the papers are in the possession of the Collector, and remain there. Mr. O'Flaherty-Mr. James Marshall came to the office to settle his sales, and when he came to this sale, Mr. Blair said that Mr. Joseph Marshall should come down, as there was goods bought in for the owner; this was on our settling day, Tuesday; I held his auction sales open until the Tuesday following, in order to allow him an opportunity of settling his sales. On admitting that the sale referred to took place, Mr. Marshall informed the Bench that it was a question of great importance to the trade whether an Auctioneer's known clerk could not in his absence make the necessary returns as required by the 15th section of the Auction Act. The Mayor to the Collector-By your own evidence it appears he delivered an account to you. Alderman Watson-This case must fail, for by the Collector's statement it appears an account was delivered, which is what Mr. Marshall has been summoned for not having done.

The Mayor-The words of the act of parliament, which constitute the offence, are neglecting to deliver an account of sales, and that has not been proved. Mr. O'Flaherty-I refused James settling the account, because he could not settle it. Alderman Watson-The case is dismissed. Mr. Marshall-I have had £283 to pay heretofore for law costs, on proceedings of a most vexatious nature, such as this, and I wish the public to know it. Am I to understand, your Worship, that the case is dismissed? Alderman Watson-Unanimously.

Mr. Marshall was then retiring when Mr. Eman, Supervisor of Excise, said allow me to hand you this, presenting him with what it was understood afterwards was a notice of appeal to the Court of Exchequer. Mr. Marshall, who was on his way out, said I have an office, Sir, I'll not take it here. Mr. Eman then threw the paper after him, and it fell to the ground. Mr. Marshall went out and took no notice.

The Mayor observed that he thought it was the officer's duty to take a more respectful course in doing his business.

Mr. Gavin-It is very discourteous to the Bench to act in such a manner, and very unbecoming of you. Mr. O'Flaherty said Mr. Eman had a right to do that, that it was the law the notice should be served in Court, and that it would be late if it was not served

Mr. Eman then handed in another notice of appeal to the Bench, and having shewn the act of Parliament which required the service of it in Court on the parties, retired.
