On the night, the up Dublin Mail from this City was derailed at near Toomevara, within a mile of where Andrew Cosgrave, the former guard, was derailed, and wounded in the head last month. It passed between the legs of the guard, Edward, but fortunately hurt nobody. The driver was killed at once, and the guard returned the fire in the direction of the shot, and the coach proceeded. A second attack proves there was no personal feeling against Cosgrave, and the design must have been to derange the Mail. A Police escort will attend the Mail every night from Nenagh to Roscrea.

On the night of Sunday, or early on the following morning, a party of three men, two of them named Michael Keeney and Michael Keeney, both notorious burglars, set fire to the dwelling of a most industrious man, named Cummins, on the lands of Boher-wood, about half a mile from the town of Tipperary, of her daughters being alarmed from a smoke in the kitchen, got out of bed and observed the thatch where she lay in a blaze; upon which she and the other inmates, who succeeded in extinguishing the fire. Mr. Eagar, on the following night, had Constable Mulholland and a party of men, who those two persons, who have been fully identified as the principals.

On the night of Wednesday, a party of armed men entered the house of a respectable farmer, named John, on the lands of Crouge, near the town of Tipperary, broke all his windows, through which they fired several shots. Heffernan intended to take some time this season for potatoe lots; and to induce him to moderate in the price of his quarter-ground, this was committed.
