DEATHS.

Yesterday, at his house, Bindon-street, Ennis, William Greene, Esq. Solicitor, for many years at the head of his profession in that district. No man was better known in the metropolis than Mr. Greene. His extraordinary size attracted universal attention, as he was admitted to be the largest and heaviest man of his time. With professional skill he possessed the qualities of sincerity, candor, and integrity, which endeared him to the public, and rendered his death a source of regret to a wide circle of friends.
