Clergyman, we have no hesitation in speaking of him as one whose ministerial usefulness, consistency of life, conversation and suavity of manners, were such as to entitle him to be ranked among the most devoted and faithful Ministers in the Archdiocese of Dublin—mild and retiring in his deportment, he exhibited in his daily walk the value and importance of the doctrines which he preached with so much earnestness and affection.
He was sincerely beloved by his late congregation, and by a numerous circle of attached relatives and friends, who have now so deeply to deplore his loss.
